Visit to Governor Landon A Direct, Able Man You Would Like Him Presenting Nancy Jo

Topeka, Kansas, Dec. 10—Alf M. Landon, the governor of Kansas, lives in this city. If you choose you may read here something about him, how he lives, how he talks, and especially about Nancy Jo, his three-year-old daughter, and Nancy's charming young mother.

The governor's real name is "Alf," not Alfred. The governor officially changed it from Alfred to Alf, because Alfred is too long, wastes time.

Newspaper men arrived from New York today and at luncheon in the "Executive Mansion" Governor Landon talked to them while they studied him. Around the table with Governor and Mrs. Landon sat Frank Burns, National Republican Committeeman, from Seattle; Henry J. Haskell, chief editor of the Kansas City Star, with more important information in his head than any other editor west or east of the Hudson river; George B. Longan, president of the Kansas City Star Company, as able a publisher as the late Colonel Nelson (who was owner of the Kansas City Star), you cannot say more than that; Senator Capper, who owns the Topeka Daily Capital and a dozen other publications, including the most intelligently edited Capper's Weekly, which goes to five hundred thousand American farms, and prints this column; Arthur J. Capruth, Jr., chief editor of the Topeka State Journal, which also prints this column, and is deep "in the black," which means profitable —also William Randolph Hearst, on his way West from New York; Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, editor of the Washington Herald—she inherits newspaper ability from her grandfather, Joseph Medill, who founded the Chicago Tribune, and Paul Block, who owns several newspapers.

They all studied and listened to Governor Landon, an American of average height and far above average ability, a thorough man. He knows American conditions and problems, knows the farmer and his trouble and knows business, for his intelligence made him a successful, prosperous business man before he became governor.

He has broad shoulders, made to carry a load, and walks with an firm a stride as any West Pointer. His eyes are brown, his expression cheerful, his nerves are not frazzled.

His prefers listening to talking, and he really LISTENS, does not simply wait for his turn to talk again. His has a strong chin, which means determination, and a forehead to balance it. All of this interests you, because Governor Landon will probably be nominated for President by the Republicans.

Paul Block says "he is a great man." Mr. Hearst says "he is an able, direct man." There is no doubt that he is a powerful, determined, thoughtful man, and one who may be President needs all of that.

The "Executive Mansion," a simple, rather small brick dwelling, on an unimportant street, of the "early General Grant" type, within and without, belongs to the State of Kansas. Governor Landon says: "Not an imposing palace, but the farmers who come here think it a fine house, better than their farmhouses, good enough for any governor; and I agree with them."

The furniture is old, each piece in its exact place, such furniture as you would see in a prosperous farmhouse. The full-size harp in one corner belongs to Mrs. Landon. She used to play it before the babies were born, but when you have babies and try to help your husband with his mail there is no time for playing the harp.

If Mrs. Landon moves to the modernized White House, everybody will praise her as a worthy successor to the admirable woman there before her. She is thirty-seven, her husband forty-eight. She is the governor's second wife. They have two children, a boy and a girl. There is another daughter of Mrs. Landon's, who died many years ago. The present Mrs. Landon married at thirty. The boy, not quite two years old, is named John Cobb Landon, Cobb is his mother's maiden name.

In comes Nancy Jo, short for Nancy Josephine, three years old, to shake hands all around and hope everybody is well, and "won't you stay for dinner?" as the crowd arrives. She is having a struggle just now because her baby brother refuses to be bossed any longer. Every mother knows that stage.

It is hard to understand why Governor Landon should bother with politics, possessing such a daughter. Nothing in nature is as beautiful as a little girl, and

U. S. Fleet Gains New Fighting Ship

Fore River Launching Guarded

War time precautions, resulting from recent sabotage acts, were taken for the launching of the U. S. S. Moffett, destroyer leader, at Fore River shipyards in Quincy today.

Fear that an attempt might be made to harm the Moffett in the launching is dto a triple inspection of the ways and launching machinery and the posting of a close guard over the new hull.

But without a hitch, the Moffett slid smoothly down the ways at 11:21 o'clock while 500 carefully inspected witnesses watched the ceremonies.

Miss Beverly Moffett of Washington, daughter of the late Rear Admiral Moffett, who went to his death during the crackup of the dirigible Akron, sponsored the launching.

7 to 10 Years For Girl Kidnaper

Samuel Vallery of North Troy, N. Y., found guilty in superior court on a charge of kidnaping 17-year-old Norma Civils of Henchman street, North End, was sentenced today in the same court to seven to ten years in State Prison.

Wearing a bandage and limping, the result of an injury when he is said to have wrecked the alleged kidnap car in Connecticut, Vallery took his sentence calmly and then walked out of the courtroom in custody of court officers.

In asking for a long sentence, Assistant District-Attorney Frederick T. Doyle declared that Vallery has a long criminal record and that he has been sought for several months as an escaped convict from Indiana State Penitentiary.

AGAWAM MAY GO BANKRUPT, REORGANIZE

Bankruptcy with reorganization was the solution proposed today for financial difficulties of the Agawam Breeders and Racing Association, operators of the Agawam horse track.

The plan was outlined, the Boston Evening American was exclusively informed, at a secret all-day meeting of major creditors in the Post Office square office of Daniel B. Gurnett, treasurer of the association.

It was proposed to file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in federal court tomorrow, to reorganize under Section 77B of the federal

State to Hit Alien Reds

Preparations for a state-wide drive against aliens who are Communists are illegally resident here is being made by city and town officials, it was learned today.

The drive is made possible under a law passed this year which attracted little attention at the time of its passage.

Today it looms, however, as a drastic blow directed against subversive non-citizen elements.

Under the amendments, it will be possible for census takers to hand over to Commissioner Mary Ward of the Department of Immigration the name, age, and nationality of every non-citizen in Massachusetts.

Never before in the State has such an accurate check been possible, and it will be used to the limit, beginning Jan. 1.

This census, besides listing citizens and residents 20 years old or over, will list all non-citizens, their age, their origin, and their residence the year before, or January, 1934.

Armed with such a roll, federal

ITALY FACES RED CROSS CHARGES

By H. R. Knickerbocker

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

Dessye, Ethiopia, Dec. 11—Answering the Italian government's communique which denied bombing of the American hospital here by Italian war planes, the Red Cross announced today it is filing a claim for damages against the Italian government through the American State Department.

Manuel Sorenson of Lincoln, Nebraska, head of all the American Seventh Day Adventist Missions in Ethiopia, declared:

"It is curious any government would have the nerve to deny the bombing of our hospital when the entire world press witnessed it."

"The Italians' two bombs gutted the operating room and the ward," Sorenson continued, "and destroyed our surgical equipment. They did damage amounting to around $5000. We have made an inventory and filed a claim for damages. Our hospital is registered with the international Red Cross in Geneva."

The bomb holes ironically enough were in the Red Cross itself, painted on the roof. Today it is still unrepaired, although the staff is working heroically to restore the burned interior.

Still distrustful of Italian bombs, the Red Cross evacuates all the wounded from the hospital and the Red Cross tents before dawn. Every morning long lines of stretchers are carried to the woods, but every morning the line lessens as more of the wounded die.

Sorenson now reports a total of 60 dead and 160 wounded, which makes the Dessye casualties probably the most numerous for one day since the war began.

AMERICAN GOVERNMENT

"The true theory of our Constitution is surely the wisest and best, that the states are independent as to everything within themselves, and united as to everything respecting foreign nations."
—THOMAS JEFFERSON in a letter to John Adams, December 10, 1819.

Crash Kills Husband of Heiress

Mario De Marmesquita, 38, husband of the former Louise Grover, Lynn heiress, suffered injuries that caused his death in the East Boston Relief Hospital today, when he was struck by a truck in the McLellan highway, East Boston.

De Marmesquita, member of a wealthy Brazilian family, was understood to have been enroute to Boston to keep an appointment with a friend who was working to have him appointed to the consular service in Brazil.

Circumstances surrounding the accident mystified police.

De Marmesquita had stopped his automobile, for some reason, in McLellan highway directly behind the Suffolk Downs race track, and had alighted when he was struck by a truck operated by Fred Marmillio of Newburyport.

Marmillio picked him up and rushed him to the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea, believing it to be a hospital. There he was directed to take De Marmesquita to East Boston Relief Hospital.

De Marmesquita married the former Louise Grover ten years ago. The wedding was one of the exclusive social events of the season.

Following their wedding they lived for several years in Brazil returning here to live with his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Grover, Ocean street, Lynn, a year ago.

200 Idle Storm Curley's House

Approximately 200 men today stormed the home of Governor Curley seeking employment, despite the request of the Governor that applications be made to the employment headquarters, 100 Nashua street.

The Governor instructed the men to go to the State House, where they received a special letter addressed to Walter S. Ryan, employment chief, directing that they be placed at work as soon as possible.

The Governor made it plain that no more letters of this type will be given out and wishes all applicants to apply directly to Ryan, leaving the chief executive secretarial staff free to perform their regular tasks.

PHYSICIANS ASK NEW LAW ON 'QUACKS'

Thousands of dollars have been taken from the purses of Massachusetts sick and ailing in the past year by "fake doctors," it will be charged by the New England Journal of Medicine, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The medical journal article, written by Dr. Walter P. Bowers of Clinton, the editor, comes on the heels of a quiet investigation by state detectives into the activities of more than 1000 allegedly illegal practitioners.

Driven out of New York by stringent laws, the unregistered doctors, most of whom, it is declared, never finished a medical course of training and some of whom have been deprived of their licenses, have established themselves in this state.

SEE NEW LAW

The move to drive out the illegal practitioners will it is expected, result in a law which will require every person practicing medicine to register annually with the state board of registration in medicine.

This would mean that the approximately 7000 registered physicians in Massachusetts would pay an annual re-registration fee of $2.

In the coming issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, it was learned by the Boston Evening American, Dr. Bowers will call for a law similar to that in New York State which drove out the bogus doctors and led them into flight-toward other states.

THOUSANDS TAKEN

"There is no doubt," said Dr. Bowers today, "that thousands of dollars have been taken from the pockets of the sick and ailing by the fraudulent doctors.

"We have learned that the law passed in New York about a year ago threw hundreds of illegal practitioners into Massachusetts.

Dr. Stephen Rushmore, secretary of the state board, declared that in order to keep a constant check on all practitioners, it will be necessary to have more inspectors assigned.

Under the regulations now in force, Dr. Rushmore said, a physician is required only to register, for which registration he pays an initial fee of $25.

There is no further registration and no further fee for medical doctors, although dentists, chiropodists, nurses, optometrists, embalmers, barbers and hairdressers must register annually.

W. R. HEARST SAYS LANDON CAN DEFEAT ROOSEVELT

PUBLISHER IS GUEST OF KANSAN

Topeka, Dec. 11 (US)—Governor Alf M. Landon was visited here yesterday by a group of newspaper publishers and editors, including William Randolph Hearst.

The governor was the host to the party at a luncheon in the state executive mansion.

The visiting notables spent about two hours with Kansas' chief executive, who has been prominently mentioned as the Republican nominee for President in 1936.

Governor Landon made a profound impression upon his visitors, who gave him a close-up study and listened with vivid interest to his views on some of the problems that confront the country.

After the visit, Mr. Hearst said:

"I think Governor Landon is marvelous."

LANDON CAN UNITE G. O. P.

Asked if he were favorably impressed with the Kansas executive, Mr. Hearst said:

"That is putting it mildly."

Mr. Hearst commended Landon's record as governor of Kansas and declared this record "is a platform in itself."

Mr. Hearst repeated his assertion that the Democratic party can be beaten, but emphasized that it must be beaten by a united Republican party. He said that Landon could unite that party.

When asked if he would support Governor Landon for President, Mr. Hearst smiled, but made no reply.

CHILDREN HOSTS, TOO

Mrs. Landon presided over the luncheon table with grace and dignity and later the Landon children aided their parents in showing the newspaper notables about the unpretentious "executive mansion." Little Nancy Jo, 3 years old, smilingly invited some of the party to "stay for dinner."

Others at the luncheon were Paul Block, publisher of a chain of papers in the East; Arthur Brisbane, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, editor of the Washington Herald; George B. Longan, president of the Kansas City Star; Henry J. Haskell, editor of the Star; Arthur J. Carruth, Jr., editor of the Topeka Journal, and Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas.

Mr. Block predicted Landon's nomination by the Republican party in 1936, and added:

LANDON'S RECORD IN STATE

Declaring he had promised Governor Landon some time ago to pay him a call, Mr. Block said:

"I have been anxious to get personally acquainted with the governor. I wanted to find out how he has managed the state's affairs.

Mrs. Patterson said:

"Governor Landon is becoming known throughout the East and my impression is that Washington women who are not for Roosevelt are for Governor Landon for President."

Auto Runs Down 4 in Worcester

Worcester, Dec. 11—Four pedestrians were injured, one critically, when an automobile police say was driven by Attorney Henry R. Fine of Olean street, ran them down today.

All four were crossing Chandler street at Bellevue street when the accident occurred.

Attorney Fine said he put them all in his roadster and carried them to Worcester City hospital.

Mrs. Evelyn Conger, 29, of Albert street, was found to have internal injuries and a fracture of the left leg and arm.

The other victims were George Brick, 27, of Pemberton street; Mrs. Anna Dowd, 30, of Bourne street, and Fred Parker, 32, of Eastern avenue, all of Worcester.

Fine told police he was going between 20 and 25 miles an hour, and that as soon as he saw the pedestrians he swerved to the car tracks to avoid them.

Police found his right headlight smashed, a fender crumpled and the radiator stove in. The attorney was released, and no charges placed against him.

Mrs. Conger was given a blood transfusion and later the last rites of her church.

"It's the Record That Counts," Says Hearst

"I knew him only by his record.

"Of course, it is the record that counts most nowadays.

"Merely pleasing personalities and facile promisers have been somewhat discredited by performance, or rather by failure of performance.

"I think in the next campaign people will want recorded facts, not empty assertions.

"Today I met the man.

"His character is also a platform.

"He is a plain, sincere, earnest, straightforward American.

"He has a wonderful American family.

"He comes from the heart of America, and in a campaign where the preservation of the American spirit and the American system is to be a dominant issue there could be no better candidate to represent that issue than Governor Landon.

"His record of clean, efficient economical administration of his office is equally important and equally convincing as a campaign document.

"The party in power—I will not call it the Democratic party, I cannot call it that—can be beaten.

"But it must be beaten by a united Republican party.

"And here again is one of Governor Landon's important qualifications. He can unite the party.

"Of course, I do not know that he will be nominated.

"I do not know what the plans of the Republican party are. I am in fact not a Republican.

"But I believe the Republican party can nominate a candidate and can adopt a platform that will win.

"I simply do not know whether or not it has the intelligent progressiveism to do it."

BORAH SPIKES ADVOCATES OF HOOVER

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

(Copyright, 1935, Universal Service)

Washington, Dec. 11—Whether Senator Borah decides, before the New Year, to become an active candidate for the Republican nomination for President—and he is disconcerting some of his Washington political friends by his peculiar borsque style of strategy—he is credited with having stopped a quiet movement under way for the gathering up of Hoover delegates.

That now appears to be the answer to what happened in Ohio the other day, when the State Central Committee, unofficially but unanimously, uttered a strong anti-Hoover sentiment. This was forced by Borah's friends.

SOUNDING SENTIMENT

It does not mean that the Idaho Senator has decided to enter the Ohio primaries.

He will not make that decision until after the meeting here on December 16 of the Republican National Committee. But he is sounding sentiment in Ohio.

It appears further that the action in Ohio will be followed in other states if Hoover's friends proceed with their designs of hand-picking delegates sympathetic toward the former President.

This has been going on in Massachusetts, and in some southern states, possibly without the knowledge of Hoover, and indeed probably so.

BETTER PERSPECTIVE

Taking cognizance of this, some of Borah's closest political friends have fixed January 1 as the deadline, by which time, in their reasoned opinion, he should announce his candidacy, if he intends to enter the contest.

Thus far Borah has not been won over to this view. He will have a better line on the situation after the meeting of the National committee next week.

Borah's senatorial friends—and it is important to remember that he has more in the Senate now than Harding had when a senatorial group brought about his nomination in 1920—have told him frankly that he needs an organization.

Always a solitary figure in American politics—the Senate's majority of one—Borah has little use for organization, no gift for it and little appreciation of its efficacy. He is a one-man band which knows but one tune, and he plays it himself.

He knows he could pick up the delegations of several states if he should say the word. It is clear he is satisfied that his political future does not depend upon this and that he is conducting today a campaign directly to the people over the heads of the politicians even those closest and most loyal to him.

200 in Lowell Will Lose Jobs

Lowell, Dec. 11—Nearly 200 employes in the Street Department faced loss of employment today after it was revealed that there is a lack of funds to keep them employed.

The plight of the street workers followed close on the heels of suspension of employes in the purchasing agent's office for the same reason. As a result, Purchasing Agent John E. O'Brien is conducting his duties alone.

Mrs. Landon helps her husband with his heavy mail, dictates answers to letters that come within her sphere. As she dictates to a stenographer, Nancy Jo, with paper and pencil, sits at a little table and takes down the dictation, in her way, copying, as well as she can, the little curlicues made by the stenographer.

She implores her mother:

"Let me dictate the letters." She may be the first woman President.

Governor Landon's other daughter, Peggy Anne, aged nineteen, slim and tall, with her dark hair drawn tightly back from her forehead, stops for a moment, hurrying back to her classes at the University of Kansas, in Lawrence, 28 miles from Topeka.

The governor's wife maintains a simple household, two women "help," a cook and a housemaid. When there is a crowd, as on this occasion, Roy Hogan, efficient chauffeur, comes in with white cotton gloves and "helps."

Damon Runyon came here from points East, ate pumpkin pie, made of Kansas pumpkins, and praised the cook in a way that would have spoiled any other cook for life. The same lady cooked for Senator Capper, when he was governor. He says "nobody could praise her enough." Now she will be spoiled, probably.

The normal crop of corn in Kansas is 120,000,000 bushels, last year drouth cut the crop to 32,000,000, the year before to 10,000,000 bushels, no crop at all. No alfalfa, no hay, the Kansas sub-soil water level fallen out of sight.

Now there is abundant rain, springs have begun flowing for the first time in several years. This year the rainfall to date is above 37 inches, more than four inches above normal.

In 1936 Kansas and other farming states will have big crops, barring "New Deal" limitations, plenty of wheat, corn, alfalfa, timothy, feed for hogs and cattle.

Someone remarked, "President Roosevelt will get credit for the rainfall." Governor Landon smiled, replied, "Well, why not? They blamed Hoover for the drouth." He believes in fair play.

Mattapan Man Stabbed, Dying

Edward Homer, of Paine street, Mattapan, was in a serious condition at City Hospital today after being set upon and stabbed by several men while walking along a street near his home.

First indication of the wounding of Homer came when John Tamors, of Walk Hill street, Mattapan, told police of the Mattapan station that there was a man standing at the corner of Canterbury and Berna streets, bleeding badly about the face.

The police rushed to the corner, but the man had disappeared. Later a telephone call from Homer's home was received, and Homer was taken to the hospital.

QUINS 'Perfect' BABIES

FILM DIRECTOR DECLARES

Editor's Note: Henry King, famous movie director in Callander directing the motion picture "The Country Doctor," starring the Dionne quintuplets, herewith presents his impressions of a week with the five famous little girls.

By HENRY KING,
Famous Hollywood Motion Picture Director.

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service.)

Callander, Ont., Dec. 11—"Cut!"

At 12 o'clock yesterday I said that word, which in movie parlance means the scene is over.

And to me the most tense situation I have ever gone through was finished.

We had finished "shooting" the Dionne quintuplets in what I am thoroughly convicted will go down as "movie history" as the greatest scenes ever taken.

I was in the nursery with the five most wonderful babies in the world for seven hours in eight days.

They are perfect in every way it is possible to express perfection.

After years of directing movies, I unblushingly say that these days with the quins have been the most exciting, the most entrancing and the happiest days of my career.

I have heard a number of rumors about the condition of the babies . . . Let me tell you right now that those five little sisters are not only normal . . . they are far and away beyond the so-called perfect babies we see in Hollywood.

We were trying our best to get the five young girls to play on the floor with Jean Hersholt and Dorothy Peterson in one of the scenes.

But Yvonne had different ideas . . . she glimpsed the door leading to the hospital corridor, spotted the keyhole, pulled a chair up to the door and while we were diligently endeavoring to get all the girls in the scene with Miss Peterson and Hersholt she walked out on us "cold."

One morning when we had the scene all ready to shoot we looked around for the fifth baby. I don't know which one. But one was missing. In their sleeping room we found the missing girl . . . She had gathered the five little chairs around her in fortress style and was hiding behind the chairs.

We decided to play a game with her, and Hersholt took a toy clown from his pocket. The clown turned and tumbled over the floor for several minutes. Finally the little lady could stand it no longer . . . She pushed the chairs aside and made a bee-line for the doll . . .

And the riot was on . . . No sooner had the one little girl discovered a new plaything than all of the girls were galloping for the toy clown . . . It was a riot and, of course, our scene was held up for at least 20 minutes until we investigated them back before the camera.

During the week we were with them we only had the camera and diffused lights working on them 10 minutes or less each day. For a total of 70 minutes.

Five-to-One Too Many For Make-Believe "Dr. Dafoe"

With the odds five-to-one against him, Jean Hersholt, screen actor who is playing the role of Dr. Dafoe in a movie featuring the Dionne quintuplets, seems to be down for the count—and it's only a single "quin" who is his adversary at the moment. The four other sisters are on hand however, as reinforcements in case of need.

"Grrr! I'm a bear!" growls Screen Actor Jean Hersholt as he and one of the Dionne quintuplets enjoy a romp on the floor of the Dafoe nursery, now the scene of unprecedented activity occasioned by the filming of the motion picture in which the five famous sisters are principals. Bears are less than no worry at all, make-believe or otherwise, to the "quin" who is getting acquainted with Dr. Dafoe's movie double. (Pictures World Copyright, 1935, by N. E. A. FEWER PUPILS, TEACHERS PERILLED

CUT IN FORCE HERE ASKED

Drastic retrenchment in Boston school financing, including reduction in number of teachers, was called for today by the Boston municipal research bureau.

Research proves that fewer and fewer pupils are attending Boston public schools and indicates that this decline is just starting, a bulletin of the bureau stated, assailing the school committee for continuing to increase the number of teachers.

RETRENCHMENT URGED

"The need for drastic retrenchment in Boston's schools is urgent in view of the critical condition of city finances," said the bulletin.

"Almost nine-tenths of regular school maintenance costs are for personnel and reductions must therefore be made in the payroll.

"Even a non-hiring policy in case of retirement, death or removal from the service would be of great help in retrenchment program.

"This 'politically painless' method of reduction has been used by the mayor for three years in several major departments with worthwhile results.

"Far from adopting such a policy the school committee has continued to increase the number of school teachers despite serious financial conditions and despite a declining enrollment.

"Delay in inaugurating this reasonable policy has accentuated the need for drastic steps at this time."

$18.31 PER CAPITA COST

Per capita cost for school operation and maintenance in Boston in 1933 was $18.31, second only to that of New York and 20 per cent above the average, said the bureau.

Current expenses per pupil for 1933-34 were $116.34, third largest of the big cities.

"The probability of greatly decreased enrollment in the near future, and the shifting of population within the city itself, call for far more extensive planning of school construction, administration and financing than has yet been evidenced by school authorities.

"Unless this is done, large financial losse may result.

"During the depression, the mayor and council have cut expenses to a greater degree than the school committee, although adequate adjustments to the needs of the times have not been made in either case."

3000 LESS PUPILS

Restricted immigration and declining birth rate are principal causes of the decline in school attendance, which has been noted as about 3000 pupils in Boston in the last two years.

Each average increase of one pupil per teacher, said the bureau, would reduce required teaching personnel by approximately three at Teachers College, 42 at the high and Latin schools, 62 in the grade schools and 16 in kindergartens—a total of 123 teachers involving a payroll of $250,000 a year.

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—With the same solemn formality by which it decrees what wheat and cotton production should be, the AAA announced today that China may ship one and one-tenth bushels of potatoes into the United States this year without paying a tax under the new potato law.

Officials found that in 1933 China shipped a little more than seven bushels of potatoes to this country. By spreading this over six years the farm administration determined China's "average."

2 TUFTS OATHS ARE REJECTED BY STATE

Two more teachers' oaths were rejected today by State Commissioner of Education Payson Smith when he sent back the signed forms of Professor Alfred C. Lane and Earle Winslow of Tufts College.

Last week the professors resigned rather than submit to taking the teachers' oath in the form prescribed by the Legislature.

The educators, however, submitted reserved pledges last night to the state department. Today the commissioner returned them to Tufts, with the statement that all oaths must be signed in the legal form.

"I repeat my observation of last week," said the commissioner, "that, under the ruling of Attorney General Paul A. Dever, no teacher's oath which deviates from the prescribed form can be accepted."

The teachers' oath objectors were given a new contention today when the American Legion, through State Department Commander John H. Walsh, urged that all pledges not submitted in regular form should be rejected.

Commander Walsh said:

"We do not feel that any individual is bigger than the Commonwealth," Walsh declared.

"It is a law now, and as such should be observed. The enforcement of it is up to the proper authorities and we are satisfied that they intend to do their duty. Generally, those refusals to sign the oath bill unless permitted to do so with reservations are publicity stunts."

Lane declared that his oath, with the amendments, had been submitted at the request of President John M. Cousens, of Tufts. A similar pledge was signed also by Professor Winslow.

PEIPING GUARDS AGAINST RIOTS

Classes at the institutions remained suspended as a result of Monday's demonstration of 6000 students who protested against the North China autonomy movement and demanded war on Japan.

Yin Ju-Keng, self appointed chairman of the newly-organized East Hopeh autonomous State, was reported to have ordered the seizure of customs and salt revenues in the 22 counties under his control, causing fears that international complications would arise, as both taxes are used in supporting China's foreign borrowings.

Shanghai, Dec. 11 (AP)—A Reuters (British) news agency dispatch from Peiping today said Manchoukuoan troops, which yesterday occupied Kuyuan, in southeastern Chahar province, had also entered nearby Poachang.

Historic Crises Bid Nation Shun Soviet, Jesuit Warns

"French Peace Came Out of World War"

By ALAN C. FRAZER

Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

Philadelphia, Dec. 11—Communization of the whole world is the aim of the Third Internationale, the Rev. Timothy J. Coughlin, professor of history at St. Joseph's College, declared to 500 students in the new public anti-Communism school here last night.

The priest-educator warned

REV. T. J. COUGHLIN, S. J.
He Points to History

EDMOND J. MOLLOY
Anathema to Soviet

He sounded a call to America to awaken to the dangers they foreborn.

"You have heard of the fall of Rome. It took 300 years and the Romans never knew what was going on.

War and Treaty

"France was warned by rumblings of revolution, but never seemed conscious of the fact that it would occur.

"In Russia, from 1870 on, everybody talked about revolution, but nobody prepared for it.

"In 1918, the World War was followed by the so-called peace treaty. All that treaty has given us is discontent and war. President Wilson fell into the hands of Clemenceau and the rest of them, and was completely deceived.

Evil With Us

"In my opinion, it was essentially a French peace that came out of the treaties.

"Italy is Fascist because Mussolini took advantage of post war conditions.

"If our freedom and democracy mean anything, now is the time to defend them. A little later—and it may be too late.

"That the whole world may become Communistic is the end for which the Third Internationale plots and works and slaves.

"It is the active agent of the political bureau of the Communist party of Soviet Russia.

"Litvinoff may talk plously of keeping the peace of Europe; yet he is an apostle of war.

"The Soviet ambassadors may assist at diplomatic soirees, gloriously attired in cape and sword —yet the naked sword of Communism is never sheathed. Always, through the Internationale, it is aimed at the vitals of non-Communist governments.

"As has been well said, its hilt is at Moscow, but its tip is everywhere.

"You will find it right here in the United States as our President found it, when he buried his diplomatic challenge to the Soviets last August.

"Then they took refuge in the reply that the Internationale was a private organization of which they knew nothing. All of which is false. For in the words of

"Wilson Fell Into Hands of Clemenceau"

Apostle of War

"The evil is with us, trying its utmost to tear our governments apart. Shall we stand idly by and permit it to do its deadly work?

"Modern Communism believes in moving into action at once, if it could. It would make the whole world Communistic tomorrow. If it delays the hand that would strike all others down, to reach this end, it is only because the favorable hour has not yet struck.

"The Communist Internationale is very much like those wild creatures of nature that can change color when danger is at hand. When conditions are favorable, its activities can be openly and officially admitted. When not favorable, its work must be repudiated and condemned. It is a great international game of hide and seek."

(Another article by Alan C. Frazer in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

"Old Glory" Must Wave, N. Y. Votes

New York, Dec. 11 (US)—The board of aldermen of New York unanimously passed the Stand-Curran ordinance requiring the display of the American flag at all public meetings given over to the discussion of political questions.

The ordinance was introduced as a direct result of the failure of Communists and Socialists to display the flag at a joint meeting in Madison Square Garden on November 27.

Both Democratic and Republican members spoke in favor of the measure. Alderman Edward J. Sullivan, Manhattan Democrat, said:

"In my opinion it is about time something was done in this city to drive this terrible menace out of the city.

"Communists, in my opinion, are making a drive to capture this city. Don't give them an inch. Don't let them parade; don't let them do anything."

Aroused by reports that Communistic doctrine was openly preached in the auditorium of the Washington Irving high school on Monday night, Dr. George J. Ryan, president of the board of education, had today ordered an investigation.

The meeting was held under the auspices of an organization called the "American Friends of Soviet Russia."

Great Dane Dog Gets Transfusion

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 11 (AP)—Man, a Great Dane, was resting comfortably today after a blood transfusion, believed by Dr. William Jaquier to be the first ever given a dog.

He developed pneumonia after being struck by a motor car and undergoing an ear operation. The donor of a pint of blood was spike, a St. Bernard.

Police Carry Out 20 in Revere Flood

Revere police in rubber boots acted as human ferries today for a score of women and children living in Dunn street, near the Revere dog track, after a water main had broken, flooding the street.

The break occurred while residents were asleep, and it was not until they awoke that they discovered cellars were flooded and the water for the coffee had been shut off.

Water department officials said damage caused by the break was slight.

Organist Hall Dead

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Walter H. Hall, 73, who served as organist and choir master in St. Luke's Church, Philadelphia, and St. Peter's Church, Albany, N. Y., after coming to this country from London in 1883, died today.

Truancy Laid to Reds In R. I. School

Central Falls, R. I., Dec. 11—Charges that local high school girls and boys are being taught Communism in the Pawtucket-Central Falls Y. M. C. A. were made here today by an American Legion investigator.

In a report to the school committee of which he is a member, Alfred J. Tennyson, the Legion prober, also declared that students stay away from school to hear Red orators and that many conduct home meetings to discuss revolutionary principles.

Tennyson has been conducting an investigation since November 13 at the instance of the school board, which had been aroused at reports of radical inroads among high school students.

CONSPICUOUSLY PLACED

Tennyson did not blame Y. M. C. A. leaders directly, but he said that Red literature had been conspicuously placed in the lobby of the institution and that youthful members of a club affiliated with the "Y" frequented Red gatherings.

"It has been called to my attention," Tennyson said in his report, "that several students of the Central Falls high school belong to a club associated with the Pawtucket Y. M. C. A., and that said club members participate in discussions which are decidedly socialistic in nature and have an adverse effect upon the minds of our students. Mr. Kenneth Dale supervises and guides these discussions.

"It is true that the school committee has no control over the students after school hours, but I deem it my duty to bring this matter to the attention of parents of this city and to the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A."

Committeeman Tennyson told the committee that he had been threatened by the "lowbrows" and told that "they would get me if I didn't lay off; and I have also been the victim of attacks from the highbrows."

The acceptance of the report of the sub-committee was by a three to two margin. Committeeman John J. Barry, who led the opposition to the acceptance of the report declared that "the whole thing is making us a laughing stock." He said that Socialistic teaching of 20 years ago was politics today.

"Is that so?" declared Tennyson, "You take the oath to defend the constitution of the United States, yet you would permit the teaching of this pacifism which would destroy nationalism."

Tennyson then read from records of the national convention of the League against War on Fascism and the meeting of this unit held recently in Providence, in which he said definite plans were made to extend their influence to high school students, church groups and liberal organizations.

"The League Against War and Fascism," he declared," is a branch of the Communist party, as I can prove it. This same League endorsed the action of Dale when he announced that he would not bear arms for his country and criticized the action of the Central Falls City Council in condemning him. They further pointed out the tremendous importance of the case and what the results might be if the Central Falls City Council was allowed to hinder Dale's activities."

He then told how a mother had visited Chairman Henry J. Meister of the committee, telling of the group meetings that were held at her home. She said that she was afraid to sign an affidavit "because she feared harm might come to herself and her son."

Tennyson also said that members of the high school were missing from their classes when a prominent Socilist was addressing a Pawtucket meeting.

Among the books on display at the Pawtucket Y. M. C. A. Tennyson said, was "Soviet Russia of Today." This book was removed after a protest had been lodged by an American Legion member, he pointed out.

In the written report to the school board, the sub-committee stated that it had sent a 13-point questionnaire to Dale asking him his political affiliations and whether he had said to the members of his classes "that Stalin is a good dictator, because he has the welfare of the people in mind—and the others have not."

DAIRIES FIGHT FOR MILK RISE

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Dec. 11 (AP)—Vermont dairymen battled for increased milk income today at the second public hearing here on a new AAA agreement for the Greater Boston market.

Opposition was expected to a demand for a two cent a quart increase, but milk leaders predicted the main criticism would not come until the final hearing at Boston tomorrow.

The formal request made by the New England dairies and the New England Milk Producers Association sought to increase producers' prices from $3.00 to $3.35 a hundredweight. This increase, if granted, would result in a one cent price boost on consumers' purchases.

THE SENATOR SAYS:

Mr. Fuller Casts Roguish Eye on Apple Cart

THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, often both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

THE SENATOR

"I'm wondering," mumbles The Senator, tucking his second section under the bar, "if the auto would upset the apple cart. And what Jim knows about it."

Everybody says "What?" all together.

Then we notice The Senator has the sniffles and his snogger is like a big, red bug-eye.

"If you have a cold in the head," says Timmy, "it certainly has plenty of room to move around in. Rock and rye?"

"Two ryes," says The Senator, "but only one rock."

The Senator puts his cigar on the bar. It is unbudding like a rose and smouldering like a dump. When The Senator puts his cigar down it is a sign he has something on his mind besides a cold in the head, and for a while it looks like he is forgetting something. But finally he says:

"Timmy, see what the boys are having."

We all say we have colds and the same.

"Sip it for a cold," advises The Senator. He takes a big sip that does not leave any rocks or rye and almost takes the bottom out of his glass, and then says: "The same, Timmy."

Then he begins to talk, making the same funny sounds, but after the third one he is talking much better.

"The Republicans are going to have an apple cart," says The Senator. "They are planning to elect Mr. George G. Tarbell, the representative, chairman of the state committee. Mr. Tarbell is the big apple grower in Lincoln and just the kind of a man the Republicans need because he can raise hell and a lot of money as well as apples.

"Mr. Vernon W. Marr, who is the Republican state committee chairman now, is a very nice man, a very nice man, indeed, but he is not just the organizer the Republicans need. In fact, I have heard it said that Mr. Marr has trouble in organizing a whist game. Anyway, I think Mr. Marr will be glad to get back to sailing his boats off Scituate, Timmy . . . Timmy"—going again into a mumble.

So Timmy fixes The Senator up and he goes better again.

"Anyway," says The Senator, "the Republicans will have their apple cart, which is a very wobbly apple cart, and with too many apples in it, and it will be kind of easy to spill. Now the best apple cart tipper-over that I know is Alvan T. Fuller, who gets a lot of votes from both the Democrats and the Republicans, and I am wondering if Mr. Fuller is planning to run into the apple cart and if Governor Jim could possibly know anything about Mr. Fuller's intentions.

"Mr. Fuller does not need any more of cash because he has got nearly all the paintings and he can stop playing with his little ashore any time, and if you ask me he has a very deep yen to dive back in the swim."

Timmy fixes up The Senator once more and we all get fixed up again, and The Senator says:

"What they are saying is that Levie Saltonstall does not ride in the subway, but that all the McSweeneys except Gene ride in the subway.

"And what they mean is that if the new State Senator William McSweeney was put in the apple cart, say as the Republican nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, the cart would have a better balance. Only they would not need Bill McSweeney if Johnny Haigis or Joe Warner is the choice for Governor because they ride in the subway. The trouble is that nearly all the Republicans want to be Governor.

"Whoever they put in the cart, including Hankus Parkman, it will be just the kind of an apple cart that Mr. Fuller would love to tip over by telling all the Democrats as well as the Republicans that he would like to be the Republican governor again.

"And when I see that Mr. Fuller says he will not run for senator, what I am wondering is if Mr. Fuller might have said to Governor Jim, like this: 'Jim, if I do not run for senator you will have a cinch for senator, and I will not run for senator but will run for governor, if . . .

"This is just a thought," says The Senator," but it is bothering me as much as my cold.

"Timmy!"

Another political tale by The Senator in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

U. S. FACES BIG LOSS AS GIRLS LOSE JOBS

Two million names and addresses of persons who entered this country between 1848 and 1891, invaluable and irreplaceable, may be lost through the shift from the ERA to the WPA, it was learned today.

At the department of immigration 135 girls have been employed transcribing entries in the department's new books.

The girls have been discharged, and the prospect of getting them back seems remote, officials said.

The names, which originally totalled 3,822,000, if not recorded shortly, will become illegible.

There are innumerable ways in which the records are used, immigration officials said.

If the son of a man who became naturalized in 1870 were to try to prove that although he himself was born in another country he was the son of a naturalized citizen, those books would be his only resource, it was said.

If a man who entered the country in 1888 should decide to become a citizen under the laws prior to 1906, which are more lenient, the records would be able to establish the date of his entry.

NEW 'HAUPTMANN KIDNAP' PLOT BARED BY WOMAN

New York, Dec. 11 (INS)—The startling theory that Bruno Richard Hauptmann, his hands stained with one baby murder, planned to kidnap the infant son of friends because it greatly resembled the slain child of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and therefore might be used in extorting more ransom money from the harassed aviator was advanced here today.

This theory is suggested by the New York Evening Journal in a copyrighted story in which further secret testimony, given shortly after Hauptmann's arrest, is made public for the first time.

This newest picture of the man, who is in the death house at the New Jersey state prison awaiting execution for the murder of the Lindbergh baby, is based on the story told to police by Mrs. Marie Hahn, wife of a Bronx restaurant owner, who long was suspicious of Hauptmann's action.

The newspaper says that Mrs. Hahn, with motherly instinct, worried over the unusual interest Hauptmann took in her baby. He stood for minutes at a time in the Hahn nursery looking down at the sleeping child, the woman is quoted as having told the police.

The authorities were impressed when they heard Mrs. Hahn's story, a story that, naturally enough, was not evidence for trial, but which led to terrible suspicions in the behind-the-scenes drama that marked investigation of Hauptmann's every movement.

The official records reveal the story. This is the way Mrs. Hahn told it when questioned in the Bronx district attorney's office:

"Was Hauptmann a visitor in your home during April, 1932?" she was asked.

This was the month in which

Dry Carols

Hutchinson, Kan., Dec. 11 (AP)—A youth temperance group chorus will serenade Hutchinson's holiday shoppers with songs deploring Christmas "spirits." The theme of the songs, said Miss Blanche Griffith, will be "drink dry, buy dry."

Dr. Condon paid the ransom money.

"Yes, sure," she said. "Once in a time he come. Sometimes he does eat, and once we have a little trouble with our girl."

Q—You mean trouble with your servant?

A—Just the girl. She says Hauptmann is always looking like he wishes to steal the baby.

Q—Did he ever see your son?

A—Yes, sure. He say a few times that he think he look at little Fritz—he call him after my husband. Then he stands and looks into the little bed. It is a fine and beautiful boy—not because he is my son.

Q—Did your son resemble any pictures you saw of the Lindbergh baby?

A—Often we talk about how they look so much alike. Both have beautiful golden hair and they look smart.

Q—Did you ever tell Hauptmann not to look at your baby?

A—You mean the time I tell him I rather he not bother the baby because he wakes up and starts to cry?

Q—Why did you tell him that?

A—Well, our girl by us does not like it. He stands and looks at the little bed a long time, she says she is afraid from him and she will go away from here. So I tell him. It looks like as I say to Fritz, that maybe he was going to do something like take my baby.

Authorities questioned today by the Evening Journal said the Hahn baby was "very similar" to Baby Lindbergh.

Bruno Lawyers Demand "Jafsie" Give an Alibi

New York, Dec. 11 (INS)—Casting about desperately for new "evidence" to gain Bruno Richard Hauptmann a second trial, defense attorneys have popped up with the unusual demand that Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, gray-haired ransom intermediary, "prove an alibi," the Evening Journal said in an exclusive story today.

Referring to reports Governor Hoffman has prompted his private investigators to obtain "tangible" evidence that Hauptmann was framed by police agencies, as claimed by the defense, the Journal said C. Lloyd Fisher, defense attorney, had voiced this dramatic demand:

"Can Condon alibi himself?"

CITE SLEEPING SUIT

The Journal recalled dark rumblings throughout the trial from the defense about Condon's connection with the case. The story added:

"But never before had the defense poised leading questions so obviously designed to throw Condon back on his heels in the matter of possession of the Lindbergh baby's sleeping suit by the kidnaper."

"On the night of March 9, 1932, Dr. Condon arrived at the Lindbergh home in Hopewell bearing with him the supposed message of the kidnapers appointing him intermediary. This is an established fact.

"That night he slept in the baby's nursery. This, too, is fact. By his own admission, he removed from the crib the two safety pins attached to the baby's blanket. He did not explain why. This is fact."

JOHN" IDENTIFIED PIN

(Dr. Condon later exhibited one of these pins to "John" at a nocturnal meeting at Woodlawn Cemetery and asked him if he knew where it came from. "John" said it came from the baby's blanket. That helped to satisfy Condon that he was dealing with the right party in the ransom negotiations).

Girl Tragedy Cause

Child Must Find Home After Burials

JOAN LEE

John Lee, 2, is going to two funerals this week; then she must find a new home.

Her grandmother, Mrs. Mae Fitzgerald, has arranged services for Joan's mother, Esther Fitzgerald Lee.

On Sunday members of the On Leong tong will bury their one-time secretary, Bennie Lee, who was Joan's father.

Joan has an aunt, Mrs. Mae Hesse, her mother's sister, who used to care for Joan. Joan was playing with Mrs. Hesse's two children when her parents died.

Nothing is known of her father's people. He was born in San Francisco. However, tong members are bound to care for their dead brother's child.

Joan was the cause of her parents' death. Her father, so-called "Mayor of Chinatown" was proud of her and took her with him to visit Chinese friends.

Her mother, formerly a cafe model in Lynn, objected to the child being with so many Chinese. She found Joan and Lee in a Chinese restaurant where he was drinking rosebranndy, brooding over his misfortune.

The parents quarreled. The Lee returned home with his wife, he turned his gun on her, then shot himself.

Pittsfield Holdup Suspect Killed

Pittsfield, Dec. 10—Police today announced today that the gunman killed in Montreal by police in connection with the Lindbergh baby's sleeping suit by the kidnaper."

Fisher, the Journal continued, declared:

"On the night of March 9, 1932, Dr. Condon arrived at the Lindbergh home in Hopewell bearing with him the supposed message of the kidnapers appointing him intermediary. This is an established fact.

"That night he slept in the baby's nursery. This, too, is fact. By his own admission, he removed from the crib the two safety pins attached to the baby's blanket. He did not explain why. This is fact."

JOHN" IDENTIFIED PIN

(Dr. Condon later exhibited one of these pins to "John" at a nocturnal meeting at Woodlawn Cemetery and asked him if he knew where it came from. "John" said it came from the baby's blanket. That helped to satisfy Condon that he was dealing with the right party in the ransom negotiations).

Canadian police notified authorities here that they had arrested Nathan Martin, 40, alias Ted Montin, as a suspect on the holdup of the Hull bank during which $15,000 was stolen and one man killed.

Authorities here have been inquiring to locate Martin for a couple of years, not only for the bank holdup here but also for other crimes in the vicinity.

UNTOLD LINDBERGH BABY CLUES TRACED

How detectives pieced together a jig-saw puzzle of clues which led to the arrest of Richard Bruno Hauptmann as the kidnap-murderer of Baby Lindbergh, and why the German carpenter was never tried for kidnaping, are revealed herewith by Lou Wedemar, veteran crime reporter and authority on the Lindbergh case, in the fourth of a series of remarkable articles. Preceding articles have appeared in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American this week.

By LOU WEDEMAR

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service, the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American. Republication in whole or in part strictly forbidden by the Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American.)

When the Lindbergh ransom certificate was found—bearing an automobile license number—the records of the motor vehicle bureau were searched at once.

The Investigators knew by a glance that it was a Bronx license number, and their thoughts flew to Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon. He was the only Bronx figure in the Lindbergh kidnaping investigations—except for the fact that the ransom had been paid in a Bronx cemetery.

But the license number was that of a man whose name had never entered the investigation in any way. The name Bruno Richard Hauptmann—or Richard Hauptmann, as it appeared on the application—was entirely new to the authorities.

Police sped at once to the neighborhood of his home, but were careful to give no alarm. They wanted to know more about Hauptmann before he had time to become alarmed. Their inquiries showed them only that he was a German, that he was a carpenter out of work, and that he had a wife and a year-old baby boy.

'No Father's Crime'

Not a likely suspect, they thought—the father of a baby would not be likely to murder another child so cold-bloodedly as the Lindbergh baby had been murdered.

They decided, however, to arrest him as soon as he left his home. A few hours after they arrived he came out, got into his car, and drove away. Suddenly he seemed to scent danger, and began to drive faster. The police pursued, and forced his car to the curb.

He surrendered, apparently bewildered, without a fight. In his pocket, as he protested innocence of everything, they found a second ransom certificate. Like others which had been recovered during the preceding three months, it had been folded lengthwise and then doubled.

The authorities flashed word of the arrest to the various specialists who had been putting together the jig-saw puzzle, and they prepared to see if Hauptmann matched as the chief missing piece.

Already it was obvious that he fitted in, in one respect—he answered in all but one particular the description of "John," as given by "Jafsie."

Clues Check

The one flaw was that his eyes were not "almond-shaped," as "Jafsie" had described "John's." "Jafsie" had said "John" might be a Swede or a German—and Hauptmann was a German; in height, build and coloring he fit almost perfectly.

The Hauptmann home and garage were searched and more of the ransom money was found. Hauptmann says he told the police where to find it. They say he refused to do so.

His tools were seized, for comparison with tool-marks on the ladder. The lumber in his garage and house was examined, for comparison with the wood in the ladder. Nails were removed, for comparison with those in the ladder.

Writing-paper was removed, for comparison with the ransom-note paper. And samples of Hauptmann's writing were taken for comparison with the writing in the note.

All the comparisons checked.

After a 29-month search, the authorities had found a whole basketful of pieces that matched into their jig-saw puzzle. All that now remained was to fit Hauptmann into his proper place in it—and the Lindbergh baby's slayer would be on his way to the electric chair.

And he told a detailed story of stock market "winnings," and fur dealings, to account for money he had in the bank, and had spent, totalling $36,000 since the kidnaping. He backed it up with his personal account books.

The $14,000, which, added to his $36,000 wealth and expenditures, to the authorities' satisfaction, proved what had happened to the $50,000 ransom—had been left with Hauptmann in a shoe box by his fur business partner, Isidor Fisch, he said.

(In tomorrow's article in the Boston Evening American Lou Wedemar tells of the dramatic trial and conviction of Bruno Hauptmann and of the evidence against him.

ETHIOPIA REJECTS PEACE PLAN; NOTIFIES LAVAL

Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press

Paris, Dec. 11—The Ethiopian government, through its Minister Wolde Mariam, announced today it was unalterably opposed to any proposal for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war which would "reward Italian aggression."

The text of the statement follows:

"Ethiopia has been the victim of an unjustified aggression solemnly condemned by unanimous vote of the Council and Assembly of the League of Nations.

"In these conditions the Ethiopian government is firmly determined to hold at a distance any proposals which, under a direct or indirect form, would accord a premium to the Italian aggressor and would fail to comprehend the fundamental principle affirmed by the Council of the League of Nations, by its committees and by the assembly—particularly the principle of the territorial and political integrity of Ethiopia—and would tend to bring pressure to bear on a feeble state in order to lead it to submit to the domination of a powerful government which has never ceased to affirm that through such force it will assure the triumph of its ambitions, with, without or against the League of Nations."

Addis Ababa, Dec. 11 (AP)—The heads of all three American missions in Ethiopia and other members of the American colony presented a signed statement to Cornelius Van T. Engert, United States Charge d'Affaires, today, protesting the Italian bombardment of Dessye.

"There was never a more deliberate insult to the American flag than Italy's bombardment of the American Mission Hospital property at Dessye and the consequent endangering of American lives," the statement said.

Dr. T. A. Lamble, head of the Sudan Interior Mission and Secretary-General of the Ethiopian Red Cross; John Cremer, head of the American United Presbyterian Mission, were among the signers.

The statement, concerning the air raids last weekend on Emperor Haile Selassie's field headquarters said:

"American and other witnesses testified that the first bombs were dropped on American property adjoining the Red Cross encampment; forty struck the compound and five the hospital, marked by a large American flag and red cross.

"This wholesale bombardment of an area which is far removed from the main town of Dessye obviously could not have been accidental.

"Through all the years of Sino-Japanese conflict, no parallel case can be cited although there are many more American missions in that affected area.

"The Italian consulate situated at Dessye is fully informed concerning American-owned property near there and its uses.

"For years the Italian authorities have known the exact location and other particulars of this property.

"Claims that munitions are stored there are ridiculous.

"We, the undersigned, hope this brutal and insulting act will open the eyes of the few remaining Americans at home who may still be defending Italy in its present attempt to conquer Ethiopia."

Haile's Throne at Stake, Declares Addis Ababa

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Dec. 11—High government officials asserted today Emperor Haile Selassie would lose his throne if he dared to accept the proposed Franco-British peace plan.

The proposals, reported based on an exchange of territories between Italy and Ethiopia, were described by the officials as "a reward for Italy, for breaking covenants and another device to delay further sanctions."

Commenting on each point of the plan as it was outlined by Anthony Eden, British minister for League of Nations affairs, to the House of Commons yesterday, officials said:

1. Ethiopia does not want an outlet to the sea unless it is free from Italian taxation.

2. Not one inch of Northern Tigre province can be surrendered because it is of great political importance and chieftains who obeyed any imperial orders, by retreating from most of Tigre province, would rise in revolt.

3. Ethiopia is willing to exchange part of Southern Ogaden province for a port, but refuses to give up the Fafan valley or any territory west of the Fafan river "because it contains oil."

4. Ethiopia will not surrender the Danakil land to the east because for ages it has proved a bulwark of national defense.

5. The answer is "no" to granting Italy a zone of colonization in the southwest because white peasants have proved unable to compete with the natives and have become a burden on the government.

Eden and Laval Move To Postpone Oil Embargo

London, Dec. 11 (INS) — Premier Mussolini scored another tactical victory over sanctionist nations today as Britain and France agreed to cajole the League of Nations committee of 18 into deferring the oil embargo.

Anthony Eden, British minister for League affairs, left for Paris today and with Premier Laval of France will leave there tonight for Geneva to effect the postponement

Many Flee Addis Ababa On False Bombing Report

Addis Ababa, Dec. 11 (AP)—A false report that Addis Ababa would be bombed by the Italians caused a hurried partial evacuation of the capital today, thousands fleeing to the hills and outlying eucalyptus groves.

The crown prince himself ordered Ethiopian women and children evacuated, and started moving the imperial treasures before the report was found to be erroneous.

Selassie Escapes When Bombs Fail to Explode

With Emperor Haile Selassie at Dessye, Ethiopia, Dec. 11 (AP)—Technical experts who examined bombs dropped in Italian air raids at Dessye last week said today Emperor Haile Selassie probably owed his life to the fact that many of the bombs did not explode.

They stated that the Italians let loose a dozen of more 250-pound bombs in the compound of the old Italian consulate, where they apparently believed the King was staying and that 10 did not go off.

Incendiary bombs took greater effect. Three wrecked and burned an American hospital, while two others set fire to a nearby Red Cross tent.

Not a single soldier was killed. The 300 persons who were killed or wounded were non-combatants, including women and children.

Mussolini Clamps Lid On News From His Army

Asmara, Eritrea, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Rome government ordered today that all military communiques be sent there for approval before being issued at Asmara, Italian army headquarters.

$50,000,000 More for Resettlement

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—Comptroller-General McCarl has approved resettlement projects to cost approximately $50,000,000. They will be located in all 48 states.

Each project, Administrator Rexford G. Tugwell said, will cost about $1,000,000, but no estimate was made of the number of families to be affected. The plan is to move families from poor to better land.

First Three Sets of Twins Greet Set No. 4

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

It's got so that twins are the rule rather than the exception in the Hausen household in Chicago. Still, the first three sets of twins seem to be finding a thrill in welcoming home from the hospital set of twins No. 4. The newcomers are Jerry Donald and Jimmy Durante Hausen. You see them in the lap of their beaming mother, Mrs. William Hausen. In the admiring circle of brothers and sisters are, two by two, left to right, Robert and Roger, four; Shirley and William, Jr., 12, and Charles and George, seven.

Clipper Off for Midway

'EARL' STRICKEN HERE

Says Britain Seized Spy's Millions

Suffering from a rare and usually fatal malady, a patient at Chelsea Marine Hospital—member of the crew of an oil tanker—amazed doctors today by asserting he is a British earl and heir to seized estates of approximately $35,000,000.

The patient is George Eston, 30, until a week ago assistant engineer on a Cities Service company tanker.

He claims to be the Hon. George Reginald Douglas, posthumous son of Lord William Reginald DuBarry Douglas of Edinborough, Scotland, who, he says, was executed by Britain for treason two months before birth of his only son.

AIDED BRITAIN'S FOES

Irrespective of the merits of Eston's claim to descent from nobility, doctors agreed he is a very sick man.

He is suffering from a rare form of tuberculosis of the bones, a dread malady that eventually brings paralysis. Already he has undergone one operation.

Eston's story is that during the Boer war his father served the King in the field, but finally aided the Boers, an act that caused him to be banished from all British territory forever and resulted in the seizure of his vast properties.

His father, he said, went to Mexico, where he was joined by his wife, and there he sold military information to an enemy of Britain.

BORN IN TEXAS

British agents laid a trap for him in British Honduras, arrested him and took him to England, where he was executed.

Eston said his mother then came to the United States and that he was born at Houston, Tex., two months after his father's death.

He is a graduate of the University of Virginia, he says, and his mother resides in Virginia now.

'YOHE SON' DENIED

Strong Refutes Thomas' Claim

New York, Dec. 11—Branding the allegation as "preposterous," Major Putnam Bradlee Strong today vehemently denied that he is the father of Hollywood extra, Robert E. Thomas, who asserts that he is the son of the Major and May Yohe, famous actress of the '90's.

Thomas, a 27-year-old "hit" player, filed suit in New York Supreme Court yesterday alleging he was born to Miss Yohe, then Major Strong's wife, in September, 1909. He asks the courts to declare him the couple's legal offspring.

Miss Yohe, through her present husband, Captain John A. Smuts of Boston, has made consistent denials of Thomas' assertions.

The youthful actor first made his claims last July when he gave out a statement he had been given away at birth.

He was raised as the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Thomas, originally of Portland, Ore., where Thomas was said to have been born.

The Thomases migrated to Hollywood after they had adopted the little boy whom May Yohe had christened Robert Strong, according ot the official adoption papers signed by Judge L. R. Webster of Multnomah, Ore.

Townsend Plan Poll in Congress

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—Townsend Plan leaders have started a pre-session poll of House of Representatives sentiment on the plan to pay a $200 a month pension to all over 60.

The poll is the first move in a new drive to crystallize opinion behind the plan.

The questionnaire asks:

"Are you in favor of the plan?

"Did you vote for H. R. 7154? (The McGroarty bill embodying the Townsend plan)?

"Can we rely upon your help to pass a bill embodying the Townsend plan at the coming session?"

CHILDS, DEVIR ELECTED; SIX CITIES VOTE

Victory of former Mayor Edwin O. Childs in Newton's mayoralty and re-election of mayors in Malden, Lawrence and Westfield marked municipal contests in six Massachusetts cities.

Expected to be pressed closely by Major-General Daniel Needham, former public safety commissioner, Mayor-elect Childs was swept back into office by a plurality of more than 4000 votes.

GRIFFIN IN LAWRENCE

In Lawrence Mayor Walter H. Griffin was re-elected with the largest majority accorded a mayoralty candidate in that city's history.

Mayor Raymond H. Cowing of Westfield had an easy time with Councilman George Brady as his opponent and was re-elected by a comfortable margin.

Beverly and North Adams were the two other cities of the Commonwealth voting yesterday, but in these communities only minor officers were chosen.

Intense interest in the Newton election, climaxing one of the most spirited campaigns in the city's history, brought out approximately 75 per cent of the registered vote of 34,000.

Statewide interest in the contest was apparent from the number of telephone calls to Newton City Hall. Among the callers were former Governor Joseph B. Ely and Speaker Leverett Saltonstall of the House.

HOLDEN TRAILS

Childs carried all but one ward, including the home ward of General Needham. Sydney B. Holden, third candidate in the race, ran far behind.

In Malden, Mayor Devir had trouble with Alderman Willesen, the latter winning five of the city's seven wards. Only overwhelming totals piled up by Devir in the two remaining wards carried him through.

Mayor Griffin literally buried his opponent former Alderman Robert F. Hancock under a deluge of ballots. He secured 25,316 as compared to 6934 for Hancock.

Chief interest in this contest was in the public safety commissioner contest in which Thomas F. Galvin was re-elected despite the bitter campaign waged by Henry J. Moore.

FIN. COM. PROBE OF 'TEACHERS FUND' URGED

Not the school committee but the Boston Finance Commission should investigate charges of attempts to sell teaching positions, City Councillor Clement A. Norton said today.

Norton said the commission, at the same time, should probe rumors that employes of the school department were required to contribute to campaign funds in connection with the recent school committee election.

The councillor assailed the plan of Maurice J. Tobin, acting chairman of the school committee, to have a public hearing before the committee as "futile—and a waste of time and money."

TOBIN PLANS PROBE

He said he had been trying since September 9 to have the finance commission make the inquiry as an impartial body with authority to summon.

District Attorney William J. Foley had no comment to make except his usual statement that any evidence presented to him would be placed before the grand jury.

Tobin said that he would call a special meeting of the board Monday, and declared that he felt sure that the committee would approve the public hearing in the event that the guilty persons had not been found by that time.

Such a public hearing would be without precedent. Other hearings have been held in the past, but witnesses were never under oath to testify.

DUTY TO TEACHERS

Declaring that the school department, more than any other branch of the government, should be above suspicion of corrupt practices, Tobin asserted:

"I feel that we owe it to the group of competent young women who have been qualified for teaching positions and who have every right to expect fair and equitable treatment.

"I feel, too, that we owe it to the parents of these young women who have made great sacrifices to provide them with the necessary education; and most of all we owe it to the citizens and taxpayers who rightfully expect that no breath of scandal shall touch the public schools."

LIGGETT WIDOW PICKS SUSPECT

Minneapolis, Dec. 11 (AP)—John Hilborn, supervisor of detectives, Minneapolis police department, announced today Mrs. Walter Liggett had positively identified Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfeld, a liquor agent, as the slayer of her husband, crusading Minneapolis publisher.

Hilborn said she coolly picked Blumenfeld out of a group of seven men at a lineup in Minneapolis city jail. Blumenfeld has been held for questioning without charge since shortly after Liggett was slain Monday night at the rear of his apartment here.

Mrs. Liggett and her 11-year-old daughter were witnesses to the slaying.

Blumenfeld, however, continued to protest his innocence, maintaining he was in a downtown barber shop at the time the crime occurred, 5:40 p. m. Monday.

Salesman Held on Memphis Charge

Police today arrested and held for Memphis, Tenn., police Malcolm H. Ritchie, who described himself as a real estate salesman here. The arrest followed receipt of a telegram from Chief of Memphis Police W. T. Griffin saying warrants were being forwarded by airmail, and that Detective Joseph Feingold would leave today for Boston.

The warrants charge Ritchie, whose alias was given as Jameson H. Jones, with giving over a questionable check in payment for two automobiles totalling $785.

MORGAN FACES ARMS QUIZ

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Senate munitions committee probably will open an inquiry January 6 into the "currents which drew America into the World War," with J. P. Morgan a witness.

The New York financier, star witness in the Senate banking committee's stock market investigation a few years ago, will be called for questioning in connection with financing the allied forces.

Whether he will open the inquiry or be called later has not been finally determined.

Levinsky's Sister Sent to Asylum

U. S. TO REPLY TO JAPANESE NAVY DEMAND

London, Dec. 11 (AP)—Admiral Osami Nagano placed Japan's demands for a navy as large as that of any major world power apparently before the delegates to the international naval conference today in a second round discussion of a problem which has threatened to wreck the parley.

The admiral, who spoke for 45 minutes, was the only speaker and the session adjourned until tomorrow when the American and British delegates will reply to the Japanese demands.

MAY WOO ITALY, FRANCE

The Japanese thesis was that a tonnage limit should be set, but with the "great naval powers" granted equality, "offensive warships" abolished or drastically reduced, and a "state of non-menace and non-aggression" achieved.

Authoritative sources said Nagano, the chief Japanese delegate, did not name the favored powers in his equality program, arousing speculation as to whether Italy and France would favor it if included, or oppose it if excluded.

BRITAIN ORDERS SHIPS

While the naval delegates were resuming their meetings, Lord Stanley, parliamentary financial secretary of the British Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons that Great Britain proposes to order seven additional destroyers for the current financial year.

He stated orders had been placed for a flotilla leader and eight destroyers, and a supplementary estimate's to be submitted to the Commons would cover the seven additional destroyers.

Experts today pointed out that unless Germany and Soviet Russia, too, were granted equality, it would prolong the ratio system which the Japanese oppose and become a possible breeder of future controversies, even if equality were granted Japan with the United States and Britain.

LAUNCHING PUT UNDER GUARD

velopment in light and fast ships of war.

Even while State and local police and federal agents passed the guests into the yard, navy intelligence aides were probing Saturday's destruction of the reduction gears aboard the new cruiser Quincy in the basin near by.

Rear Admiral Paul B. Dungan, inspection officer at the Fore River plant, admitted the reduction gear of two pinions on the new cruiser Quincy hads been wrecked beyond repair.

A delay in launching may extend for another month, he said.

AGENTS ON SCENE

He made his announcement in the face of repeated denials by Navy authorities that there would be any probe, despite the presence of government agents at the yard.

Secretary Swanson, who denied that any investigation would be made, declared at the same time that the damage was purely accidental.

International scope was given the sabotage aboard the Quincy when authorities in Washington mentioned in the same breath the serious damage to the Royal Oak, British battleship, recently reported.

It was thought that a plot to cripple fighting equipment might a world wide and that similar "accidents" might occur to other U. S. ships.

LAUNCHING GUESTS

Admiral W. R. Gherardi, of First Naval District; Admiral Dungan, Captain A. K. Atkins, of the Brooklyn navyard; Captain W. F. Amsden, under orders as captain of the cruiser Quincy, wrecked by sabotage.

Commander C. E. Battle, executive officer of the Quincy, was also on hand, as were Commander A. H. Rooks, ordered as captain of the Phelps, sister ship to the Moffett; Captain C. M. Cimmer, superintendent in charge of construction; Commander C. F. Bryant, inspector of ordinance.

Tells Court of Quarrels

LEWIS F. CURTIS, JR. MRS. MARIE CURTIS

COLLAPSES IN COURT

Mrs. Curtis Admits Peeking

After denying that she knew her 19-year-old son had been set to spy upon her husband, Mrs. Marie T. Curtis of Newton collapsed today on the witness stand in Middlesex probate court.

Mrs. Curtis' denial was made after she admitted "peeking" at a motion picture she said had been shown by her husband at their home in Commonwealth avenue, Newton.

In direct testimony the wife and mother of two children had characterized the film as "vile."

In court yesterday she declared he showed the moving pictures in their home, that he kicked a male guest downstairs during a New Year party in their home, and that she no longer loves him.

She also testified he threatened her, accused her of drunkenness, lying and misconducts and compared her unfavorably with other women.

Judge Louis L. Grern, counsel for Mrs. Curtis, offered the film in evidence and declared he would seek permission from Judge Leggat to show it in the courtroom today.

Curtis was expected to take the stand today. He testified briefly yesterday under cross-examination by Judge Green.

He denied the charges made by his wife. Shown the roll of movie film by Judge Green, he said it was similar to one shown in his home but denied responsibility for the showing.

Floods in Yugoslavia

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Dec. 11 (AP)—Disastrous floods in the Vardar River Valley inundated many communities of South Serbia today and spread destruction through the countryside. One death was reported.

POLICE OPPOSE MERIT SYSTEM

The Massachusetts Police Association today opposed abolition of competitive examinations for police promotions and Commissioner McSweeney's recommendation of a merit system of advancement for captains and lieutenants.

The protests were recorded by Lieutenant James J. Fee and Martin J. Dunn, officials of the association, at a hearing before the civil service commission at the State House.

Lieutenant Fee, vice-president of the association, pointed out that under a merit system an officer could write out a glowing report, exaggerated in detail, for which he received false credit.

On the other hand, the police officials maintained, shy officers who perform creditable service are overlooked for promotion when they give only a modest report.

Chief Archie F. Bullock of Arlington, opposed a change on the grounds that favoritism would increase jealousy.

Miss Frances Nichols, civil service advocate, said Commissioner McSweeney was too new on the job to know enough about each man to invoke the merit system. She pointed out that he would necessarily be obliged to rely on the recommendations of others.

Gunmen Bind Driver in Dighton

Two armed men hijacked a truck containing more than $10,000 worth of merchandise in Dighton today, drove the truck to Boston, unloaded it and then abandoned it in Cambridge after binding the driver and covering his head with a burlap bag.

The victim of the hijacking and robbery was Camille Cardinal, operator of the truck owned by the Fall River and New Bedford Express Co. Lucian Cardinal, brother of the victim, is president of the concern.

According to Cardinal, operator of the truck, he was passing through Dighton on the way to Fall River when his truck was forced off the road by another machine. A man, gun in hand, jumped on the truck running board and ordered him to get off, he said.

As he alighted from his truck, another man grabbed him and after covering his head with a burlap bag, threw him in the rear of the gunmen's car.

Cardinal said he was driven along in the direction of Boston for about an hour and that there was a stop. He said he believed that stop was made to unload the truck.

Cardinal said the stop was of about 15 minutes' duration and that he remembered being driven for another 15 minutes when there was another stop and he was tied up and thrown into the back of his truck.

He said he heard one of the gunmen say, "Come on," and that he spent 15 minutes freeing himself from ropes so he could seek police aid.

MEEHAN DENIES STOCK RIGGING

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—The securities commission today met a charge of "prejudice" with a refusal to dismiss its proceedings against Michael J. Meehan, Wall street operator, for alleged stock manipulation.

Munroe Goldwater, Meehan's counsel, flatly denied commission charges that Meehan had created artificially a price in Reliance Aircraft Corporation stock. John J. Burns, commission counsel, had characterized as "criminal" such a market activity for the purpose of unloading stock.

Before making his dismissal motion, which was denied, Goldwater contended the government treated as "light humor" matters that involved his client's reputation.

He accused the commission of organizing a publicity campaign against Meehan and termed "grim humor" a statement by Burns that "Mr. Meehan will play the part of the chief villain in this piece."

CHRISTMAS JOY--OR GLOOM? IT ALL DEPENDS ON YOU!

Two weeks from today will be Christmas—but what kind of Christmas it will be for hundreds of needy persons in Greater Boston is up to those upon whom Fortune has smiled more broadly.

It will be up to you and others who have a job, who have warm clothing, who have a warm home and who are sure of regular meals.

It will be up to such persons as those who, tomorrow night and Sunday night—and other nights—give of their time and their talents in the interest of charity.

And it should be up to you and you who, not possessing the exact talents in the way of entertainment, could aid if you would.

With each day's mails, scores of appeals for aid on Christmas Day—just a meal for youngsters who hope for Santa Claus, but hope in doubt, are received by the Editor of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund.

BRUNSWICK PARTY

And tomorrow night, another of the Basket Fund parties will be held at the Hotel Brunswick, in the beautiful black-and-silver Casino Room.

In the Casino Room, where Eddie Elkins and his orchestra are featured, petite Janice Carroll, Boston's newest vocal find, will head the entertainment bill.

Commencing at 8 p. m., a de luxe dinner will be served by the management, headed by Director L. Marshal Thompson and his aide, Ernest Borden. The dinner will be priced at $2.50 a person and a generous percentage of the proceeds will be turned over to the 23d annual Christmas Basket Fund of these two newspapers.

THEATER BENEFIT

The entertainment program will begin at 10 o'clock. On the bill in addition to Miss Carroll, the regular Brunswick floor show and others will be Miss Sheila O'Donovan Rossa, popular stage and radio singer; Georgs H. MacFarlane of Arlington, radio tenor; the "Sixteen G-Girls" and many other stage and radio acts.

The "G-Girls," whose symmetry and precision in executing difficult dance routines remind one of the English "Tiller Girls," are making their initial Boston appearance under direction of Miss Gertrude Doian.

Among other acts in the Brunswick show will be Ben Coleman, formerly with Ben Bernie's band; Adrienne Duplain, 11-year-old singing star of Wabas, and Francis Mastroiana of West Newton, tenor, who won the William Randolph Hearst cup for voice in California.

In addition, the "Three Winter Sports," a dancing team composed of Dorothy Bell, Louise Totten and Jerry Marenghi, will entertain.

Tonight the dance line will appear at a basket benefit show in the Jamaica Theater, sponsored by Representative James W. Hennigan.

BROWN DERBY AIDS

Following the Brunswick benefit night, Anthony Brando's Brown Derby will have its own Christmas Basket Fund party next Sunday evening. The Brown Derby, located in Arlington street near Stuart, is unique as a night club.

The Brown Derby, too, will have the 16 "G-Girls" as one of the features of Christmas Basket Fund Night. In addition to the regular program of entertainment there will be another special bill composed of leading stage and radio performers. Jim McHale, genial leader of the Brown Derby orchestra, will act as master of ceremonies.

As in the case of Club Mayfair and the Brunswick, the proprietors of the Brown Derby are contributing a generous percentage of the receipts to the 23d Christmas Basket Fund.

FROLIC AT ARENA

"A Skater's Dream"—star feature of the Gala Skater's Frolic of the Olympic Skating Club at Boston Arena—is another Christmas Basket Fund benefit. It takes place Saturday evening from 8 to 12, at the Arena, and admission tickets, priced at only 40 cents, are on sale at Basket Fund Headquarters, 294 Devonshire street, just off Summer. Telephone Liberty 4000.

Tonight at Boston Garden, the all-star indoor football game between a team of All-Notre Dame stars of Knute Rockne's coaching opposes an All-Collegiate eleven. Details of this colorful contest, in which the Christmas Basket Fund also shares, will be found in the Sports Section of this edition of the Boston Evening American.

Meanwhile appeals for aid continue to pour in on the Christmas Basket Fund Editor. Pitiful stories of privation, stark recitls of near-starvation, pile up with each morning mail.

Following are ame of the Appeals received.

CASE NO. 35

Please send me a Christmas Basket. God knows I need it badly. I am lonely sometimes in my tenement as I am without anything to eat. I don't get anything from anybody. I hope and pray you will send me a basket.

If you want to come and see for yourself, you are welcome. I have to use lamp-light as I can't afford electricity. I am very poor.

I haven't shoes to put on my feet or a coat for my back. Please send a basket to my two sons and myself and cheer us up for Christmas. Please help us for God's sake.

This family lives in Malden. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor at Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 35.

CASE NO. 36

I am writing to ask you if you would please remember me and my family with a Christmas basket. There are six of us in the family. My husband works for the ERA and we find it very hard to get by on what we get.

We had a very bad Thanksgiving, and I hope we will have a good Christmas. My children keep asking me, "Mummy, why can't we have a turkey?" Logic telling them that maybe God will help us to get at least some meat for Christmas.

I wish you would please remember us for I do want my children to be happy on Christmas. A Christmas basket will make my children very happy. I know they will never forget it. Please try not to forget us. God bless you.

This family lives in Roxbury. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor at Liberty 4000, and asking for Case No. 36.

CASE NO. 37

I am in need. I am an old man of 87 years and am crippled, so if you would please send me a basket I would appreciate it very much and it would make a merry Christmas for me.

This man lives in the South End. Anyone who wishes to help him may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 37.

CASE NO. 38

I am a veteran of the World War, having been in the hospital in France six months after the Armistice was signed and I am still under the doctor's care. I have a wife and two small children who are badly in need of food and clothing, but I can't get any help from Uncle Sam from my compensation.

My wife's health is run down from undernourishment, I do not consider my own health as I know I'm too far gone.

I receive a few dollars a week from the welfare which hardly keeps the life in me. A Christmas basket would surely be a Godsend. It would be wonderful to know what one square meal would feel like in a whole year. My children are five and three years of age and clothing of any description would be welcome.

Food and clothing of any description would sure be appreciated.

This family lives in the South End. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 38.

CASE NO. 39

I have six small children and they had a poor Thanksgiving. One child is in the hospital with pneumonia because I haven't enough bed clothes. I certainly need some.

My husband is a veteran but does not belong to any post as he can't afford to join. He is a painter and only gets two or three days a week work, so you can see it is pretty hard for us to get by.

We have tried hard to keep off the welfare. We will certainly be thankful for anything we receive. Here is hoping you won't forget us. Wishing you all a very Merry Christmas, thank you.

This family lives in Roxbury. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 39.

BASKET APPLICATIONS MUST BE APPROVED

In order that Christmas Baskets may go only to deserving and needy families, each application must be approved by a priest, a minister, a rabbi, or charitable organization. If you wish to apply for a basket, therefore, get the signature of one of these persons.

A special effort to reach needy families not receiving city aid is requested.

Address all names and lists as well as contributions to the Christmas Basket Fund, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

"Goodfellows" Rally to Aid Christmas Basket Fund

Two of the "three R's" in a dancing education, the team of Renate and Rita have agreed to run over from their current engagement at the Brown Derby and do some fancy stepping in tomorrow night's Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund Show at the Hotel Brunswick. Just to even it up, they will also appear next Sunday night at the Christmas Basket Fund Show in the Brown Derby. Renate and Rita have appeared in some of the smartest night clubs throughout the country.

Little Merit Seen in Ban on Tax-Exempt Bonds

Philip Nichols, Boston attorney and chairman of Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce taxation committee, today further analyzes for the Boston Evening American the recent report of the special legislative commission recommending the raising of $17,000,000 additional in state taxes.

Today's article by this nationally known tax expert is the second in a series of three. The concluding article will be printed in tomorrow's editions of the Boston Evening American.

By PHILIP NICHOLS

The recommendation that the Commonwealth and the cities and towns issue no more tax exempt bonds and notes has little merit as a revenue producer.

If such bonds and notes were made taxable, the interest rate would have to be correspondingly higher, and anything that the state and municipal treasuries gained in taxes would be lost in additional interest payments.

The repeal of the exemption from the income tax upon interest and dividends in the case of a person whose income from all sources is not over $1000 is sound in theory. The tax is in reality a property tax measured by income, and no other states grant exemptions from all taxation on stocks and bonds up to $20,000 in value (the amount necessary to produce $1000 income at 5 per cent) nor does Massachusetts grant any such exemption in the case of other classes of property.

Nevertheless the proposal seems rather harsh and would undoubtedly work considerable hardship in actual operation in the case of persons physically incapable of earning a living but able to keep off the relief rolls by using the income of their savings in their productive years or of the proceeds of an insurance policy.

Excessive Pay

The allowance of excessive salaries paid by closely held corporations as a deduction from corporation income and the subjection of such taxes to the individual income tax of 1¼ per cent when they are really dividends, not deductible from corporation income and taxable at 6 per cent to the recipient is a form of evasion which has been dealt with by the federal authorities since the beginning of the high war-time taxes.

If it has become common in Massachusetts and cannot be dealt with under existing law, it should be prevented by appropriate legislation. Care should however be taken to see that the taxpayers are protected from arbitrary and unreasonable determination of what constitute reasonable salaries by revenue agents unfamiliar with the proper scale, especially when salaries are made contingent upon earnings in future years.

Tax Income

The proposal to increase the tax burden upon the much harassed public utility corporations by some 2.0 per cent requires careful investigation before its merits can be adequately judged. Since the rates of such corporations are subject to public regulation, subject to the constitutional limitation that the rates cannot be limited to such an extent as to deny the corporation a reasonable return on its investment, an additional overhead charge of $5,500,000 such as is proposed is likely to be passed along to the customers, a result which the legislature might be powerless to prevent.

If such were the result this proposal would merely be another perhaps necessary device of spreading the burden of taxation upon the people of moderate or restricted means, with the added advantage from a political standpoint, that the resentment of those who bore the burden of the tax would be aroused against the public utility corporations rather than against the legislature.

The complaint of the Commission seems to be, not that the public utility corporations pay less taxes in proportion to the value of their property than individuals and other corporations, but that they pay the same taxes as other taxpayers. If they ought to pay more taxes than they do at present, would not taxes on net income be more appropriate than taxes based upon the difficult, if not impossible task, of weighing and evaluating the advantages which public utility corporations enjoy over business corporations through their monopolistic franchises against the disadvantages of having the price of their product and services limited by public authority?

The proposal to subject to the local property tax the merchandise of non-manufacturing corporations has some merits, but presents serious practical difficulties.

The existing discrimination against individual dealers in favor of corporations is more apparent than real, because, in Massachusetts, almost every dealer who has any substantial amount of merchandise gets himself incorporated and takes advantage of the lower rate of tax. It is very difficult to enforce a tax on any form of movable goods at $35 or $40 a thousand. The rate is high enough to give rise to avoidance or evasion.

If the assessment is on a given date, the shelves of all the merchandise will be bare on that date. If the assessment is on the average inventory throughout the year, and the law is strictly enforced, assuming that constitutional objections to the validity of such a tax are overcome, it will be avoided by the adoption of the practice of storing all but the day's requirements in warehouses in a neighboring state.

Fail to Collect

It is true that most of the other states attempt to tax merchandise of domestic corporations by means of a property tax, but although such taxes are not evaded with as much thoroughness as such property taxes on intangibles, no state succeeds in collecting taxes on such property on full value at the real estate rate. In some states, where the constitution permits it, merchandise is taxed at a lower rate or upon a lower percentage of value, than real estate.

In other states, having a constitutional provision similar to that in Massachusetts, and ostensibly taking merchandise of corporations at full value at the full local rate, neither a banker nor an assessor would be either shocked or surprised in the slightest to discover that a merchant has valued his merchandise in his sworn return to the assessors at but 35 per cent of the value which he placed upon it in his statement to his bank when he was seeking credit, and few assessors would dream of questioning a valuation as high as 35 per cent of true worth.

It is not improbable that under our present system we collect as much in taxes on the merchandise of corporations, in proportion to value, as any of the other states, and that we would collect no more if we adopted the proposal of the commission. Merchandise should not be taxed by a direct property tax with any hope of enforcement unless the constitution is amended to permit classification of property.

There appears to be no rational objection to imposing on parimutuel betting on horse and dog racing a tax as heavy as the traffic will bear. Even a tax so heavy as to drive out of the Commonwealth altogether these demoralizing forms of public entertainment, however it might aggravate the state's financial problems, would not be an unmitigated public misfortune.

Tax Approved

A license tax on mechanical devices embodying games of skill or chance operating for profit would be equally unobjectionable with the tax on pari-mutuel betting. It cannot however be safely assumed that the revenue would necessarily be the number of existing devices multiplied by the amount of fee, as a heavy fee would probably drive out the games from the less profitable locations.

The proposal to tax the so-called "dividends" of mutual insurance companies is a proposal to tax as income that which is not income, but a return of an overpayment. No one who rents a "drive-yourself" automobile and left with the owner a deposit of $25 would feel that, if he brought back the car after driving it far enough to incur a charge of $15, the $10 returned to him was income either to the user or to the owner of the car, or that it ought to be taxed as income. The situation in regard to mutual insurance companies is analogous.

The proposal that the tax commissioner should collect the motor vehicle excise tax seems sound. The law might well go further and require the payment of the tax as a condition precedent to the granting of registration.

(In tomorrow's Boston Evening American Mr. Nichols will analyze the remainder of the report.)

FACTS

Washington, Dec. 11—President Roosevelt allotted $167,150,000 to the resettlement administration and announced its program would be speeded up in order to bring "the more abundant life" to the American people who were in distress.

Latest reports of the United States Treasury as of November 1 show that $8,600,000 of the resettlement administration fund had been expended.

Of that amount, $3,872,971, or about one-half, had been spent for rent, stationery, office supplies, salaries of officials and other administrative expenses of resettlement administration.

Sons of Italy Stage Banquet

Among those invited are Governor Curley, Grand Venerable Judge Felix Forte, Judge Vincent Broga, Judge Joseph T. Zottoli, the Rev. Joachim Maffei, Italian Consul-General Guido Segre, Selectman George S. McLaughlin of Belmont, Commandatore Saverio Romano.

Turnabout Aids Police Applicants

Worcester, Dec. 11 — Fourteen men rejected by aldermen, today had a new chance to get on the police department as the result of two orders filed by Aldermen Axel T. Sternlof, who voted against their confirmation.

The orders ask for a survey of the police department and a continuance of the present civil service list, which expires May 31, 1936, until the survey is completed.

Fugitive Faces Prison Return

A return to the state penitentiary at Tucker, Arkansas, faced Fred Charlton, 18, today. Necessary papers were signed by Governor Curley, and he is due to start his trip back some time today.

Captured in the alleged attempt to steal an automobile here, fingerprints revealed that he escaped from the Arkansas prison last spring after serving six months of a five-year sentence for larceny.

BUDGET NEXT PROBLEM FOR ROOSEVELT

Washington, Dec 11 (U8)—Back in the capital after three weeks' absence, during which he laid the basis for his re-election campaign, President Roosevelt today got busy on his legislative recommendations to Congress.

He is devoting himself to the budget, which remains the greatest single problem now confronting the administration.

Although the election is almost a year away, the political firing has already begun and the President has girded to defend himself from attack.

During his recent trip, most of which he spent at Warm Springs Ga., the President made a series of speeches which virtually outlined the platform on which he intends to run for reelection.

His central plank will be that he has restored agriculture and manufacture without impairing the nation's credit.

Mr. Roosevelt returned to the White House yesterday morning "immensely pleased" at the reception given his farm speech in Chi-

They are George Bradford, five, Michael Canale, nine, Mildred Canale, seven, Eleanor Bradford, 11, and Lenora Canale, 10. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. George T. TRACK LOSSES TAX EXEMPT

Some measure of consolation to Massachusetts residents who lost money on horse and dog races was afforded today in the government ruling that track losses may be deducted from income tax returns.

The Board of Tax Appeals in Washington ruled that such losses may be deducted only in states where pari-mutuel and other forms of race track gambling are legalized.

With handles at the two horse tracks and three dog tracks in Massachusetts approximating $75,000,000 in the past year, the government stands to lose more than $2,000,000.

The Washington ruling came in the case of Francis M. Cronan, Washington sports writer, who was allowed to deduct $890 in track losses from his income tax return.

Young Olvany Battles for Life

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Dec. 11 (INS)—George W. Olvany, Jr., 23-year-old son of the former leader of Tammany Hall, who shot himself yesterday after giving a "farewell party" to three friends, was still in critical condition today.

The youth, who had been convalescing here fro millness that set in after his graduation from Brown University last June, left notes indicating he had decided to kill himself because he feared he would not recover.

13 SAVED IN FIRE

5 Children Led Out at Quincy

Thirteen persons, five of them young children, were assisted to safety by police as a two-alarm fire swept the Litchfield Block in Water street, South Quincy, early today.

Those rescued, members of three families, made their homes in the upper floors of the three-story building.

The blaze, said by Fire Chief William Sands to have been caused by hot ashes in the sign painting shop of Healey, Junior, swept through the first and second floors with damage estimated at $3000.

It was discovered by Patrolman Edward Wuerth, who smelled smoke while standing some 50 yards from the building. Investigation disclosed that flames had already reached the second floor.

After sounding the alarm, Wuerth, accompanied by Patrolmen Carl Seppala and Thomas McNally, entered the burning building to arouse the families.

Those assisted to safety were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Canale and three children, Leonora, 8, Michael, 9, and Mildred, 11; Mr. and Mrs. George T. Bradford and two children, George, 5, and Eleanor 11, and Mrs. Hilda Beals and three grown children, Mary, 22, Everett, 20, and Hilda, 18.

Patrolman Runaway 'Rodeo Star'

Patrolman Joseph Boland, of Roxbury, qualified for the trick-riding contest at the next rodeo today when he jumped on a junk wagon careening behind a runaway horse, leaped from the wagon seat to the back of the terrified animal and brought it to a stop.

This happened in Washington street, Roxbury, before scores of scattering pedestrians. Boland had previously tried to halt the runaway by hanging to the bit rein and had been dragged several feet. He rode horseback for about 200 yards.

Julius Stone, of Intervale street, Roxbury, the junk dealer, who was in a restaurant when the horse ran away, was skeptical about returning it to a livery stable where he had hired it, so Boland obliged.

Mayor Resigns In School Strike

Mulberry, Kas., Dec. 11 (AP)—Mayor C. H. Gilbert and City Councilman John Gaunce has resigned and seven other councilmen threatened to do so today after a strike by nearly 800 students protesting nonpayment of teachers' salaries.

The students demonstrated yesterday after the council rejected a proposal that the council pay $2000 to the school board for an abandoned building to furnish the needed funds.

WALLACE QUITS URGING CROP REDUCTION

Washington, Dec 11 (AP)—Secretary Wallace today pictured "redistribution of income" as a prime necessity the nation cannot escape.

The agricultural secretary, in his annual report, favored an increase in the proportion of the national income that goes to poorer persons. He held this would increase consumption and make for expansion of production by factory and farm.

CALLS FOR EXPANSION

Wallace paid stress on expansion, in contrast to AAA's crop reduction programs, described as emergency measures only. Wallace contended they were made necessary by high tariffs.

He said complete industrial and agricultural balance and economic nation is essential to full economic recovery.

"Partial coordination," he wrote, "undertaken from the standpoint of individual industries, must give place to a general comprehensive co-ordination aimed at increased production and increased payrolls, if we are to have full employment, full production and higher living standards."

DEFENDS CROP CUTS

Wallace said it was "muddle thinking" for city dwellers to blame the agricultural adjustment administration for crop limitation.

"Actually, the original cause is the country's refusal to allow agriculture to regain its foreign market," he said. "We fail to import goods enough to enable foreigners to buy our agricultural products.

"Lower tariffs could restore this market, and it is unreasonable and unfair to blame the effects of crop limitation on the crop-control machinery rather than on the tariff policy which makes the limitation necessary."

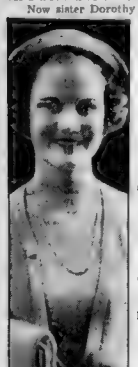
Dorothy McKey Announces Her Engagement

By BETTY ALDEN

THE DAUGHTERS of the McKey clan are doing their best to further the ancient athletic rivalry between Harvard and Yale . . .

A few years ago Mary Frances McKey married James Mott Hallowell, Jr., who, though not an athlete, was a true son of the Crimson . . .

Now sister Dorothy has made the official announcement of her plans to become the wife of Ben Hallowell, one of Harvard's outstanding hockey stars, and Barbara Farmer, her cousin, is Mrs. Benjamin Ticknor, wife of the famous Ben who was one of the greatest all round athletes to attend the University in Cambridge . . .



DOROTHY McKEY

On the other side of the fence is Barbara's father, uncle of Dorothy and Mary Frances, who is director of athletics at Yale . . . so at present, the Crimson is leading the Blue by odds of three to one . . . and when, and if, there are any little Ticknors and Hallowells, friends will not be surprised to see them going through the routine of forward passing and drop kicking at a very early age while their proud parents and grandparents look on and chant "Hit the Line for Harvard" . . . with a faint, but persistent, echo of an occasional "Boola, Boola" . . .

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Prouty, formerly of Boston, have come over from their Parisian home on the Rue de Lille, to renew old friendships on Beacon Hill . . . They are staying at the Ritz-Carlton, only a stone's throw from the old familiar by-paths of the Hill and the welcoming doorways of friends and relatives . . . The latch strings will be out for them at 54 Trimmer street, home of the Guy Warren Walkers . . . Mr. Prouty was Mr. Walker's brother-in-law through a former marriage . . .

Peggy Leland and her mother, Mrs. Edmund Leland, are out in Cleveland visiting the William Weirs, whose son, James, is engaged to Peggy . . . Since the engagement was only recently announced, the Cleveland friends of the bridegroom-to-be are rallying around with lots of parties to introduce Peggy to all her future companions and her social calendar out there is so crowded that she isn't expected back in Brookline for ten days . . .

Though Miss Bullock is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rockwood H. Bullock of Worcester, her name appears on the Boston deb list and many members of her family are registered in the exclusive little black book which denotes membership in the "400" . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Bullock are presenting their daughter at a dance in Horticultural Hall, to be preceded by a dinner for the ushers and out-of-town guests . . . Visiting Miss Bullock over that week-end will be Miss Janice Roberts of Chicago, Ill. . . . Miss Sally Foster of Boston and Miss Margery Benkema of West Point, New York . . .

Place cards will be laid for these house guests at the usher dinner as well as for Miss Vera Bullock, cousin of the guest of honor; Miss Sally Coe, Miss Isabel Baker, Miss Janet Heywood, Miss Deborah Lowell, Miss Eleanor Daniels, Miss Frances Hill, Miss Rosamond Riley, Miss Dorothy Dean . . .

Honor Reinette Plimpton Tonight

OLD MAN GRIPPE, nemesis of the New England climate, is no respecter of persons and yesterday almost performed the meanest of tricks by keeping a debutante in bed on the day of her coming out party . . . As it is Reinette Plimpton, who has been laid up for a couple of days, is planning to be up and ready to greet her guests tonight at the dance her parents are giving for her at the Ritz-Carlton . . .

Preceding her dance the ushers will be entertained at dinner, also at the Ritz and their dinner partners will include the Misses Joan Chapin, Miriam Little, Alloe Plimpton, Frederica Plimpton, Louise Stevens, Katharine Day and several out-of-town girls, including Elizabeth Plimpton of Buffalo, Marcia Williams of Providence, Nancy May of Rye, N. Y., Alyse Hunneman of Philadelphia, Jane Rovensky of Greenwich, Mary C. Pew of Philadelphia, Jane Day of New Haven and Isabel Hulinge of Baltimore . . .

Miss Hunt Is Bride in Melrose

MANY FRIENDS from the South Shore who have competed in frequent yatching events with Helen Hunt and Ransom Kelley, assembled in Trinity Church, Melrose, today to watch them embark upon the matrimonial sea.

The bride, daughter of Harry Hampton Hunt, has been very prominent in the Duxbury summer colony where Mr. Kelley and his family, the Edmund Sears Kelleys of Brookline, have also been prominent summer residents for years.

Rev. Abbott Peterson of Brookline and the Rev. Warren C. Herrick officiated at the wedding ceremony at which the bride was given away by her father. She wore a princess gown of ivory uncut velvet with a filmy tulle veil cascading from a halo cap of tulle and a small filet of orange blossoms. Lilies of the valley were combined with bouvardia in her bouquet.

Bridal Party

Miss Jane Kelley, post debutante sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor, gowned in golden velvet with a matching capelet and slight train, brown velvet slippers and hat and an arm bouquet of African daisies . . . The bridesmaids, Miss Gwen Rossiter of Manchester, N. H., and Miss Nancy Whiten of Westfield, N. J., wore similar outfits of rust velvet with brown accessories and African daisies.

Little Miss Anne Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Sears Kelley, Jr., of Chestnut Hill, and Miss Virginia Van Derwerker of Westfield, N. J., a young cousin of the bride, were dressed in period frocks of pale yellow taffeta with wreathes of sweetheart roses in their hair as they walked up the aisle scattering rose petals in the bride's path.

Immediately after the knot was tied the bridal couple and their parents hurried to Mr. Hunt's home in Melrose to await all the guests invited to the reception. Mrs. Kelley wore a gown of deep rust velvet with a bodice of beaded marquesite over gold metal cloth.

Edmund Sears Kelley, Jr., of Chestnut Hill was best man for his brother and a cousin, Stillman F. Kelley, 2d., of Wellesley was on the usher staff. Other ushers were Harry Watson of Williamsport, Pa., cousin of the bride, Wilmot W. Boynton of Scarsdale, N. Y., Frank Benson Lawson of Salem, Francis King of Milton and Joseph W. Lund of Chestnut Hill.

Dana Hall Grad

Today's bride was graduated from Dana Hall and from Wheaton College with the class of 1934. Her bridegroom attended the Belmont Hill School, and Harvard College, and is now completing a course at Massachusetts State College in Amherst. Until April he and his bride will live in Amherst, after which they will be at Kennebec Farm, Fairfield, Maine.

Last evening, the bridal party was entertained at a buffet supper at the Hunt's home after the wedding rehearsal. Other entertaining before the wedding included a bridesmaids' dinner party given Monday evening by Mrs. Joseph Lund of Chestnut Hill. The same evening Mr. Kelley entertained his ushers at the Harvard Club. Mr. and Mrs. Edmund S. Kelley gave a large Sunday afternoon tea in honor of their son and his bride-to-be.

Cecilian Guild Members Busy

Sewing Circles Active

By MARGARET DOWNEY

"DOLDRUMS" are going to hit Boston society . . . with nothing of interest looming on the horizon for the next two weeks. Everybody's hectically doing Christmas shopping . . . leaving society columnists with nothing to babble about for a fortnight.

Cecilian Guild manages to do much, irregardless of the season. Tuesday mornings the club holds "sewing bees" at the League House . . . guild members throw open their homes for "quilting parties" . . . all to supply worthy mothers with comfortable layettes.

In its charity work this year, the guild departed from its usual course of supplying holiday baskets and has inaugurated a milk fund in its stead.

Directing the guild in all its activities are Mrs. John G. Donehue of Dorchester, Mrs. Henry Elliot Foley of Hyde Park, Mrs. Thomas Kelly of Jamaica Plain and Mrs. William Arthur Reilly of West Roxbury.

Members of the sewing circle are Mrs. J. B. T. McManus, Mrs. Henry Farley, Mrs. George Coyne, Mrs. James Tierney, Mrs. C. J. E. Kickham, Mrs. William Nolan, Mrs. Joseph Leary, Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, Jr., Mrs. John Cremmens, Mrs. Thomas Keating, Mrs. William Kirby, Mrs. Joseph Fallon and Marion O'Brien.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. James Fitzsimmons and was followed by a wedding reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Powers of Winchester.

Mr. Brennan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Brennan of Woburn. On their return from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Brennan will make their home in Melrose.

Leaguers Busy

As most of the characters in the Junior League's annual children's play "Water Babies" are animals and insects, the costume committee has a problem on its hands, trying to make pretty young League members look like an otter, a dragon fly or a salmon.

Mrs. Joseph T. Walker is in charge of the designers, Miss Marjorie Bemis, Mrs. A. R. Crane, Mrs. J. B. Greason, Miss Frances Holmes, Miss Susan Means, Miss Helen Richmond, Miss Gretchen Thompson and Miss Margaret Woodworth.

While Miss Carrie Neal Augustine, Mrs. Edward Bond, Mrs. George Draper, Miss Mary Harwood, Mrs. T. Jefferson Newbold, Mrs. John Thomas and Mrs. Mark Wentworth are scouring the shops for the appropriate materials and trappings. The play is to be given at the Repertory Theater on December 26 and 27.

Exhibit

Mr. Robert Treat Paine, Jr., who is an associate in the department of Asiatic art at the Museum of Fine Arts has arranged for a private viewing of an exhibition of Japanese Screens to be held at the Museum on Tuesday afternoon, December 17.

Admission will be by card for subscribers and their friends. Specially constructed platforms have been constructed in the Museum's Special Exhibition Gallery, so that some fifty odd screens from the Museum's large and important collection may be seen at eye level.

HOLLAND

NEW FILM Stars Revealed By Box Office Returns

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Through the enterprise of himself, or his press-agent, Edward Small, production head of the sturdy independent picture-firm, Reliance Pictures, anticipates the coming of the New Year by a full three weeks and submits, from Hollywood, a quite comprehensive and very interesting survey of the year 1935 in filmdom.

Mr. Small lists three momentous happenings as the most important events of the year in Hollywood. The discovery of 14 new stars he places of first importance. He thinks that Hollywood's republication of its 1934 "economy program" ranks second to the discovery of the New Fourteen, and pays homage to the memory of Will Rogers by stating that star's death as of major moment.

George Holland

Who are the stars? Mr. Small names them as follows: Fred Astaire, Eleanor Powell, Nelson Eddy, Lawrence Tibbett, Robert Donat, Errol Flynn, Lily Pons, Gladys Swarthout, Nino Martini, George Houston, Freddie Bartholomew, Louise Rainer, Rosalind Russell and Ginger Rogers. And, the producer avers: "Records indicate that no year has brought so many stellar names into prominence."

This department is ready to disagree with several of Mr. Small's selections as being big lights of new stars, but it seems significant that eight of the nominees made the big time grade through music—through their ability to dance or sing.

Other important developments of the waning year, as noted by Mr. Small, are four in number and interesting.

"Discovering of William Shakespeare as a scenario writer," is the item the producer ranks fourth in his list. Can Mr. Small have forgotten the Douglas Fairbanks-Mary Pickford production of "The Taming of the Shrew?" Technically, he may well omit that venture from his reckonings, because "The Taming of the Shrew," although Shakespeare was accredited duly with original authorship, was flayed (according to the screen credits) with "additional dialogue by Sam Taylor."

Improvement in British-made pictures, which helped to put American producers on their toes.

The encouragement of color pictures, sponsored by the release of "Becky Sharp," and the announcement that some25 will be made in 1936.

Famous Star in a New Role

"Mister Hobo," the film which comes to the Keith Memorial screen tomorrow, gives the famous George Arliss a new role, that of a tramp. Here he is in a scene with Viola Keats, one of the featured players in the cast.

Boston After Dark

BRUNSWICK CASINO—The stateliest room in town, with Eddie Elkins' fine orchestra, and selected entertainers. The famous Brunswick food is an attraction.

CASCADES—Tom Maren's fast-moving colored show, "truckin'" to a band that is definitely "hot." Harlem at its liveliest brought to the roof of the Hotel Bradford.

CLUB MAYFAIR—Broadway's elegant night club and bar, with popular Joe Rines and his music, a first-rate floor show, and The Three Variety Boys, who are Ben Ginsburg's current pets. They should be.

COCOANUT GROVE—Ranny Weeks singing and directing an excellent band in a Ruben Bodenhorn setting which brings the breath of the tropics to Piedmont street. Ten beautiful girls, Jimmy and Nora Bell and Ethel Greniere are present.

CRAWFORD HOUSE CAFE—Dominating the populous Scollay square section, this famous old Boston spot cajoles the customers with a very funny show, continuous dancing and entertainment.

GAY NINETIES—A new Boston rendezvous, featuring the "Bowery Follies," with the "Five Kewpie Dolls," whose gross tonnage is 2200 pounds. One of the real vogues.

HI-HAT—New England's smartest barbecue, with modernistic decor, Guy Principato and his Silver Strings, and Selma Cort, unusual torch-singer, entertain. A perfect take-in.

HOTEL ESSEX—Elissa Marvella, danseuse exotique (and how), Ruth Collins and Jimmy McLachlin, the nimble-witted introducer, are the entertaining highlights, with Ben Hoffman and the Hotel Essex Orchestra playing for dancing.

NEW BROWN DERBY—One of the midtown big-three among the night clubs. Jimmy McHale's grand music, a typical New York floor show (casting by Kitty Brando), a line of beautiful Pomeroy-Earle Girls, and a pair of interesting bars.

SILVER DOLLAR BAR—The longest, most famous bar in town, and tables for 500, this Washington street spot attracts society and the help, strangers and the steady about-towners, featured performers and the chorus, all in a steady flux that makes it the most cosmopolitan spot downtown.

STATLER—Joe Reichman and his band, Charles Barron and Joan Blair in society dances that win a rave and rate it. One of the more decorous places, and highly worth-while.

STEUBEN'S VIENNA ROOM—Famous for its food and moderate tariff, this comparatively new fixture in the Rialto's night-life, makes dining, supping melodic through the cadences of Jack Fisher's music. You pass the bar going to your table. Or you don't pass it.

THE DEN—Where the stars of the stage greet the gray of the dawn under the spell of the celebrated Ruby Foo and her marvelous Chinese dishes. Boston's most alluring night spot.

Allan Jones Picked for Ravenal Part

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 10 (US)—The casting of the debonair Ravenal in "Show Boat" has been a much-debated question on the Universal lot, so few actors have both voice and looks. So Allan Jones, who seems to qualify in both respects, has been borrowed from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for his part, which is his biggest opportunity since he came to Hollywood.

Jones plays opposite Irene Dunne and, of course, will have a chance to prove that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has claimed for him ever since his appearance in "A Night at the Opera." Irving Thalberg believes he is starting material. Ravenal should come easy to him, for he played the same role in the St. Louis company.

No girl ever worked as hard in her life as Margaret Sullavan in "Next Time We Live." She wants to go East to spend Christmas with her family and her picture is now scheduled to finish December 21.

If it's any later she won't be able to keep her holiday date because she starts almost immediately after the first of the year in "Strangers at the Feast."

Shnindel Kalisch, a Chicago actress who was signed some time ago by Universal, will make her debut in "Strangers at the Feast" which is a continental play by Bernice Ladoz. Samuel Ornitz is writing the adaptation.

• • •

The European jaunt of Jean Muir, or should we call a business trip a jaunt, has helped the young lady considerably. She returns much changed and more sure of herself than she was when she left Hollywood.

They tell a funny story on Jean, who made a personal appearance for Warner Brothers at "Midsummer Night's Dream" in Paris and made a picture in England. She was called upon to make a speech in French and she got her tongue twisted and mixed up her phrases and the French went mad over her, thinking she was "tres" cute.

Chatter at Hollywood: The incorrigible May Robson is exactly like a naughty child. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer decided after her strenuous personal appearance session and her play, "Kind Lady," that she ought to rest. But rest and May are strangers. She hates the word so she breezed into Hunt Stromberg's office and demanded that she be put to work.

"Work," said Hunt, "why we wanted you for Clark Gable's brother in 'Idle Hands.' Secretary,' but I was told you had been working too hard."

"Working hard," sniffed May, "I haven't started." So today she was on the set, makeup and all.

The most glorified of all the glorified movie girls in "The Great Ziegfeld" is Virginia Bruce. In one number she wears a train that is so enormous that six girls are a part of it. The six girls not only carry it, but have it draped around them in lieu of a costume. Virginia, who is certainly one of the prettiest girls in Hollywood, has the feminine lead in the next Philo Vance story, "The Garden Murder Case." Edmund Lowe makes his debut as Philo Vance, the role which William Powell created on the screen.

'Rendezvous' at Loew's; 'Coronado' Arrives

Two major first-run features, William Powell in "Rendezvous," and George Raft and Joan Bennett in "She Couldn't Take It," comprise the new program at Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters, beginning tomorrow.

"Rendezvous" is based upon the happenings of the famous American Black Chamber in World War days. His leading character furnishes Mr Powell the most unusual portrayal of his career as a secret criminologist.

William Powell

• • •

Rosalind Russell appears opposite Myrna Loy as Mr Powell's leading woman in "Rendezvous," and is slated for a role by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Miss Russell's performance as Joel, from advance reports, advances her greatly in her career.

Minnie Barnes, the English actress, plays the part of a bewitching spy who proves to be the source of Mr. Powell's screen troubles. Lionel Atwill, Cesar Romero and Samuel S. Hinds are in the cast.

• • •

"She Couldn't Take It" tells the tale of an ex-bootlegger who is commissioned to tame the members of a society-prominent family with a fiare for front-page publicity. Walter Connolly, Billie Burke, Lloyd Nolan and Wallace Ford are in the supporting cast.

• • •

The twin screens of the Paramount and Fenway will feature a picture "Coronado" tomorrow, ushering in a new week, which finds Jack Haley, a Boston boy, among the important players. On the same program is Warner Oland in "Charlie Chan's Secret," with Rosina Lawrence, Herbert Mundin, Henrietta Crossman and Edward Trevor.

New names, new faces and new songs are claimed for "Coronado." In addition to Mr. Haley, who is billed in first position, are Johny Downes, Betty Burgess, Eddy Duchin and his orchestra, Allen White and Leon Errol.

The songs in "Coronado" are heralded as tuneful in the extreme "Too Took Mr Breath Away," "Ali's Well," "Keep Your Fingers Crossed," "I've Got Some New Shoes" and "Down on the Isle of Oomph" are some of the songs. Richard Whiting, who composed the unforgettable "Japanese Sandman," and the war-ixment, "Til We Meet Again," is the composer.

At the Tremont

Today and tomorrow at the Tremont, Robert Donat and Madeline Carroll in "39 Steps"; and Alice Brady in "Lady Tubbs", are programmed as the feature pictures.

Beacon Bill

Sybil Jason in "Little Big Shot", and James Dunn in "Welcome Home" are the current pictures at the Beacon Theater.

New Olympia Films

The new program at the Washington St. Olympia features "Ship Cafe", with Carl Brisson and Arline Judge, and "The Last Days of Pompeii", with Preston Foster.

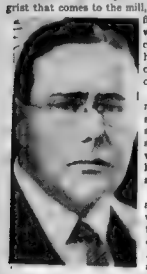
THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers



ROBERT E. ROGERS

The Missus tells me that I ought not to write a column on this subject. But I say that all is grist that comes to the mill, that there's as good fish in the sea as ever were caught, that charity begins at home, and sundry other wise aphorisms of the same nature.

Besides, I have noticed that women always get unnecessarily hatred up about this subject, whereas I have never known a man to turn a hair about it.

Anyway, my local and family pride is wounded and something ought to be done about it. If it can be printed as a new item, it ought not to bother people in the form of a philosophical disquisition such as this column habitually contains.

To be brief, the subject is the Cimex lectuarius and the Blattida, or (in Spanish) the cucaracha, and the remark which wounds my family and local pride was made by a so-called scientist at a New York meeting of the National Association of Insecticide and Disinfectant Manufacturers.

"Bedbugs and cockroaches came over with our best families on the Mayflower—and our best families still have them."

Boston Blue Bloods Had Their Troubles, Too

I can't quite make out why the "Golden Lion" which landed in Boston in 1630, the personnel of which was so much more distinguished than the Mayflower, is to be neglected and passed over in favor of the comparatively bourgeois passenger list of the Mayflower. I think we might agree that the cimex lectuarius was present on both ships—aye, and its big cousin, the Periplaneta Americana ("especially numerous on ships") and much more alarming than its baby cousin, the Phyllodromica Germanica, which, judging by its name, is probably Nazi in its sympathies. We call it the Croton Bug.

I seem to remember having read English novels of a low, naturalistic order in which the Cimex-and-so-forth was taken pretty much for granted, and I object strongly to the adjective Americans on the Periplaneta, quite as much as I object to fastening the Cimex on the Mayflower, quite forgetting Christopher Columbus and the Santa Maria, the Pinta, and the Nina, not to mention Lief Erickson and his dragon ships, as well as the expedition of the Cabots, who in those days spoke to anybody who happened to be around, including Henry VII.

Hunt for Cimex Never Traditional Pilgrim Rite

My reasons are, I think, cogent. We are told on the authority of William Maxweil Evarts that the Pilgrim Fathers, when they landed, fell first on their knees and then on the aborigines. After that, the accounts differ.

But nowhere have I ever run across the information that the first thing they did was to get out the old kerosene oil and turpentine and go on a still hunt for the Cimex.

Of course, when the N. A. of I. and D. M. remarks of the first families that they still have 'em, it is obviously referring to the parlous condition of our brethren in Manhattan, where, we are told, family life is impossible without frequent visits of the exterminator. But that doesn't wring our withers. Those Cimexes and Blattidae obviously came over on Hendrick Hudson's "Half Moon" and had nothing to do with the Mayflower at all. And even the Half Moon does not account for Manhattan's chief plague, the termite ant, which has been known to gnaw steel beams in two and even to chew modern chromium furniture in all the newest shapes.

Mayflower Passage Gave Bugs Taste for Furniture

Whereas our Mayflower descendants won't touch anything except curly maple highboys, lowboys, tip tables, trundle beds, Winthrop desks, pine corner cupboards—thus to the great profit of the fake antique furniture business. Oh yes, and the bookworms, which the bugologists forget to mention.

Scientists tell us that the future is going to be one long battle to the death between the insect world and us. Already the bug population of the world weighs three billion pounds, far more than all the weight of the human population.

Let 'em come! say we. The descendants of New England housewives need never be afraid of a few Cimex and Blattidae. The training of three hundred spring cleanings will not stand us in vain. Caesar had his Brutus, Charles the First his Cromwell, and the Cimex, etc., had his Priscilla Mullins! Even though Longfellow doesn't mention the fact.

ELY IN ATTACK ON 'RAW DEAL'

South Quincy Two-Year-Old Knows All the Comics

As smart as she's cute, Eleanor Marie Butman of South Quincy already knows all the answers. She can tell you who was first President of the U. S., or almost anything else you need to know.

Tax Rise Seen for State

CENTRALIZED POWER HIT

Attacking the "New Deal" bureaucracy and high taxation, former Governor Joseph B. Ely returned to Boston today from Washington.

His attack on the centralization of power at Washington was warmly applauded by 300 members of Boston Rotary Club, whom he addressed at a luncheon in Hotel Statler.

At this gathering the former governor said:

"Anyone familiar with the possibility of dishonesty, graft and corruption in the conduct of the ordinary affairs of government, as we have viewed it and known it in the granting of licenses, the awarding of contracts for public works, the purchase of lands, and the appointment to office, must view with the fear of absolute destruction the granting by the people to the central government of the power, over business and agriculture of the United States, through executive order or the acts of Congress, to accomplish a planned economy.

No Excuse

"Fortunately, as bad as the economic situation may seem, I see no reason for even the United States to jump into the sea of chaos which economic planning must, almost of necessity, bring about.

"We have taken the medicine of depression, which in and of itself cures most of the evils of a wasteful and extravagant expansion.

"Now, while the natural laws of economics are bringing us out, why should we not hesitate to retard the natural return to economic prosperity?

"I beg you to consider, and after consideration, to reject, any step toward substantially greater centralization of authority in the Congress of the United States or the chief executive of the nation looking toward the carrying out of a planned economy in accordance with the ideas of the New Deal, as we now recognize and understand them.

"Just as postmasters, collectors of revenue, marshals of the courts have in all times been the political henchmen of the administration, so the new planners and their representatives throughout the nation, the members of this great bureaucracy, will become, in the ordinary course of human events, under penalty of removal, the political henchmen of the administration in power."

Tax Boost

In speaking about the probability of increased state taxes in Massachusetts, the ex-governor said, prior to the talk to the Rotarians:

"I believe in the practice of real economy and would like to see the cost of government cut to the cloth provided by our present taxes.

"This can never be done, however, while the departments are loaded to the gills with unnecessary employes, while the institutions are run on a three-shift instead of a two-shift basis.

"While the debt burden remains as it is, you can never get rid of the cost of maintenance of institutions which are added year after year."

Vice-President William Roger Greeley presided.

Doctor in Death Race to Lonely Isle

Los Angeles Harbor, Dec. 11 (INS)—A race against death was being made today by a Coast Guard cutter speeding to lonely St. Nicholas Island, 70 miles off the coast, where eight-month-old Edna Aggie was reported critically ill.

The request for medical aid was picked up on a short wave radio by William Dufrane, an amateur operator.

3 More Victims Of Mad Dog

Lawrence, Dec. 11 — As Pasteur treatment was begun today on six victims of a mad dog the names of three more persons, two of them children, were added to the list of those who require treatment.

The new victims said that they had been bitten by a white Esquimo Spits dog.

They are Michael Bortnik, 13, of Exchange street; Samuel Kelsey, 44, of Fairmont street; Fred Lo Piano, 7, of Park street, all Lawrence.

Landlady Victim In Cambridge

Cambridge rooming house owners today were watching for a confidence man who fleeced Mrs. Elizabeth Babineau of Orchard street, Cambridge, giving her a bogus check for $5 and receiving $3 change.

Mrs. Babineau described the man as about 30 years old, wearing a dark gray suit, gray coat, and hat.

Turkey Party By YD Friday

Needy families of the boys who fought in France with B Company, 101st Infantry, YD, will receive turkeys on Christmas through a party to be held next Friday night at the YD Memorial Club, 200 Huntington avenue, Back Bay.

Woman Stricken By Rare Malady

Doctors today at the City Hospital were confronted with a case of Paget's disease, a rare malady, which causes the head to swell.

In a serious condition with the disease and also heart trouble is Mrs. Julia Colley, 75, of Lenox street, Roxbury.

CHILD IS PRODIGY

Infant Wonder Amazes Elders

Eleanor Marie Butman isn't two years old yet, but she knows who was the first President.

She also knows who made the first American flag.

And she can also count up to 20 without assistance.

Eleanor won't be two years old until December 20 but she has proved to be thus far a child prodigy.

Flaxen-haired daughter of Mr and Mrs. Allan Butman of 19 Piper place, South Quincy, the little girl has amazed all the elders who have questioned her.

Every newspaper comic character the girl picks out and names, and she has met several tests in identification by her father, an engineer of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company.

Burns Declines Governor Race

John J. Burns, counsel for the Securities Commission in Washington, had definitely declined today to be a candidate for Governor here.

The former Superior Court judge in this state spiked reports that he was a candidate by asserting that he is too busy on his present job to entertain the idea of seeking the chief executive's job in this state.

South Boston Man Held in Shooting

Following what police described as a violent quarrel with his wife, during which a shot penetrated the floor of their kitchen, Arthur W. Barton, 35, was arrested at his home in East Eighth street, South Boston, today.

Mrs. Barton was found screaming out of the home by Sergeant Mortimer O'Connor of the Athens street station. Barton was placed under arrest, charged with discharging a revolver within the city limits.

Mrs. Barton told police that her husband has not worked for five years.

"Mad" Dog Bites Mary but She's Not Mad

MARY LOUISE FOWLER MRS. JAMES FOWLER

That Eskimo Spis dog that ran amuck in Lawrence and Methuen yesterday has the sympathy today of little Mary Louise Fowler, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Fowler, Springfield street, Lawrence. "Yes! He bit me," said Mary, "but he was sick, and didn't mean to do it." Mary is showing mother her bandaged finger after the dog, which was afflicted with rabbies, had taken a nip. Mary was given Pasteur treatment.

500 Yule Trees Here from Canada

More than 500 Christmas trees and evergreen decorations arrived in Boston today from New Brunswick and Nova Scotia aboard the Eastern Steamship Company's steamer Yarmouth.

Vessels leaving Maritime Provinces next week have been chartered to transport at least 4,000,000 evergreens for the American market.

Guffey Coal Bill Decision Appealed

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 11 (INS)—Nineteen coal mining companies today filed an appeal in the U. S. circuit court of appeals here for reversal of the decision by Federal Judge Elwood Hamilton, Louisville, holding the Guffey coal control bill constitutional.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Annice Brink

"Santa Claus has gone out to feed his reindeer," said the sign sitting in an empty throne, with a fenced-in runway before it. But we would have words with Santa (for the first time in a long, long while) and so we waited.

This was at White's. Santa came back in due time, and he had brown eyes that really twinkled, and a pillow behind his belt, and his name was Jack Kemp. Ordinarily he sells shoes, but once he was a showman. Playing Santa is a delightful role for him.

At Jordan's, Santa is without a pillow. And he fills his uniform nicely. There is a frosty sparkle to his blue eyes, probably abetted by the rouge on his nose. His name is Joseph Thayer, and the theater is his profession, all year 'round.

Schoolboy Complexion Keeps Santason His Job

Here also is Santason. If you've wondered how he has miraculously stayed the same size through several Thanksgiving Day parades, when the Tony Sarg balloons come out . . . he, Sebastian Danna, simply stopped growing at an early age. A stock boy in the store, he will probably be Santason as long as he keeps his boyish complexion.

No rouge for Joseph Colbert, Roxbury steamfitter who makes a jolly, beaming Claus at Houghton's. He attributes his puffy red cheeks to his strenuous occupation. And he is NOT padded!

"I Wish I Were Twins," was so popular a little while ago that the radio and records deluged listeners with it.

Eddie Delange, who wrote the number, is in town with his dance band. He wishes he wrote it ten years ago, when a tune of equal popularity would have brought its proud papa thousands of dollars. Then, radio did not "kill" a song in a few months.

Eddie's check in payment for "I Wish I Were Twins," he said in a small, sad voice was—$40.

Horsiest Man Here Can't Ride a Horse

Billy ("Horses") Ryan, a wedge-featured, wiry newspaper man, has the reputation of being just about the horsiest man in New England, if not in the country. He knows the record of every horse in public life—trotter, race horse or polo pony. He knows their blood lines, a most difficult accomplishment. He's been to 23 Kentucky Derbies.

He can't ride a horse!

Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Jr. of Cohasset was outstandingly smart at the Horse Show . . . in fact, her ensemble of fur coat and hat all but shone in the murkiness of the armory. It looked like leopard, but had a savage beauty that the usual leopardskin loses in the captivity of a well-cut coat . . . her hat was a side-squashed "chechia" type, of matching pelt . . . she designed both . . . but it took an explorer, Colonel Charles W. Furlong, to come forth with the information that it was not leopard, but the beautifully matched skins of cheetahs.

Gayest Bathroom Ensemble Fitting Gift for Your House

Quite the gayest bathroom ensemble . . . a fitting Christmas gift for your house . . . is the set of window and shower curtains in matching oiled silk that I found at R. H. Stearns.

Confetti was the inspiration for the newest two-piece suit that pretends to be hand-knit and gets away with it beautifully. Large, colorful blobs are scattered through the cottony yarn. For the sun-seeker. Another pastel boucle that's silky, also at the Emily Shop, Temple place, has quaint contrasting velvet ribbons strung through the shoulders in sunray pattern, and woven around the neckline. Just as good under a nice fur coat (except the striking black and white model) as in a trunk headed south.

Harvard Again: The boys aren't averse to picking up a bit of pin money now and then. One of the simplest ways is to answer roll call for an absentee (only possible in classes of a hundred or so) and charge him 15 cents for services rendered . . . For a while there was somewhat of a clamp on the hiring of pretty waitresses . . . it's off now . . . a rule is in force, authorizing dismissal of a waitress seen with a student . . . but upperclassmen say that only an occasional freshman breaks the rule, mostly because it is one.

The 24,000,000 People who read the Hearst Daily and Sunday Newspapers are BUYING AMERICAN and BUYING NOW!

AMERICAN WOMEN are the best dressed, the best groomed, and everybody admits and asserts, the loveliest looking women in the world.

They have, furthermore, the keenest sense of style, and with it, a very highly developed capacity to seek out the best values.

Right now they are spending eleven million dollars every week buying new winter coats.

Some are buying sable coats, some mink, some black Persian lamb, which is quite fashionable this year, some are buying chic looking coats with big fox collars, others just warm cloth coats that are snug and comfortable.

Ten million of these women are readers of Hearst newspapers.

Last year these ten million women who read Hearst newspapers bought $200,000,000 worth of gowns, $60,000,000 worth of silk stockings, $30,000,000 worth of soft silk lingerie. As purchasing agents they bought the food for 7,000,000 homes and they probably were highly articulate when it came to the purchase of a million automobiles.

These good and good-looking, and generous and gracious American women buy and use good American furniture, carpets, rugs, draperies, fixtures and utensils.

They have a high American standard of living to maintain and they have the wherewithal to maintain it.

These women think American, they live American, and they BUY AMERICAN.

They constitute a large and most important part of the twenty-four million sound, stable, loyal Americans who take, read, approve and support the daily and Sunday Hearst newspapers.

The Hearst papers are American papers.

They are edited entirely and exclusively for good Americans—men and women—who enjoy American liberty and do not abuse it, who understand and venerate American institutions, and who are capable of creating prosperous conditions for themselves and others out of the unlimited resources of this still undeveloped land.

These intelligent, thrifty, successful Americans know how to create, accumulate and disseminate the wealth which this wonderful land liberally provides.

They know how to SPEND money.

We are glad to be the representative newspapers of these 24,000,000 good Americans, and glad to know that they are bringing back general prosperity by BUYING AMERICAN AND BUYING NOW.

I Want You Only

By Elenore Meherin

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

"Ricky, dearest," she wrote back, heartbrokenly, "don't get too impatient. Think of the child we soon shall have—such a strong, glorious child. Worth aching for, worth even missing so terribly the beloved YOU."

Nell brought trays to her mother. She tried to fluff out the once beautiful hair. It was fading. Not a pale, soft gray. A ghastly pink-white that gave a weird, unreal look to Mom's emaciated face.

Henry Mason stood awkwardly at the bed. Sometimes he held Mom's hand and asked unhappily, "Can I do anything for you, Dora? Shall I read the newspaper to you?"

The atmosphere in the dingy house became insupportable. She feared it would hurt her child. From every corner voices whispered, "You'll have to bring your baby here to this sweat-box. You're in a trap. You can't get out. You'll never get out!"

Ricky would find escape. A fine, free, happy escape. The anguish and parting would end Nell clung desperately to her high, shining faith. He wouldn't fail her. He couldn't!

Ricky's Letter

It was the end of March, the date when Ricky sent his money. None came. Instead was a letter. Nell hid her face and wept widely reading that letter.

This was Ricky's letter.

"Vera Holmes is in Detroit. The Ajax Motor Company has bought out the Arnold. They're planning to enlarge in a big way. Vera looked me up. She's made an appointment with her uncle and says my future is assured.

"But I think I'll stay here with Lee Edwards. They've promised me a big raise when I've worked six months. By the first of June I should have $125 a month.

"Of course, I'll see Vera's uncle. We had lunch together. She spoke carelessly of $300 a month as my salary. If that comes true, Nell, dearest, all our troubles will be over.

"She gave a dinner party. Lee was also invited. He loaned me a tuxedo and insisted I go. He said it was policy. Well, anyway, it was a glamourous affair. A lot of fun sitting down again to a festive table—having a chance to laugh.

"Vera's uncle is a traveled fellow with a fund of stories to tell. There were four other young couples. Music, dancing, gaiety I enjoyed it. I had a grand time.

"But when I got home, Nell, darling, I felt like bawling because it seemed a dirty trick to you."

The tears were hot in Nell's eyes when she reached this paragraph. Ricky liked rollicky, happy things. Always. Once he had written

"There's a little maid up here who makes up the beds. About 18—a whimsical, paineie kid. Stands on one foot, rubbing the other shoe up and down her leg and mooning at me. Do you know, dear, I'm so starved for laughter and conversation I string her along? You've no idea how hungry a person gets for mere human companionship."

Nell didn't want Vera Holmes, who was a most appealing, seductive woman, to come upon Ricky in one of these devastated, seeking moods, when anything with a gentle voice and female form would be attractive to him.

He liked Vera. She wanted him. Enormously. Nell had seen it in her avid, flaming eyes.

The letter continued: "Lee is giving a week-end to the same crowd. I'll be expected to go. You don't mind, do you dear? It's almost imperative—if one is to remain sane—to get out from under and forget."

She wept bitterly now. She felt sorry for herself, resentful of her thickened figure and the pinched sahrpness of her features.

Glad Rickey wasn't seeing her these days. He wouldn't remember her in this disconsolate ugliness. Yet she felt detested.

No matter what misery the woman bears, even to the despoiling of her body, the man is free. He can step forth, trim and gallant, desired by beautiful women in the very moment his own child comes into life.

She didn't want to deny Ricky pleasure. But she was afraid. She recalled the night he had gone off to the party.

And that he admitted freely his interest in women. Any day in the week he could pick out a dozen girls who were most intriguing to him.

Now, coupled with his native liking for the sex, was his appalling loneliness

"I'm so sick of coming into this empty room night after night," one of his letters said. "I work like a dog, hoping to wear myself out so that I will not lie awake thinking of you and wanting you so madly.

"But there's no killing off this kind of an ache. As Oscar Wilde once said, the only way to get rid of a temptation is to yield to it. The only way I'll ever get rid of you, Nell, dear, is having you'"

Could he remain faithful these long four months?

Nell knew very little of psychology. It wouldn't have mattered She had the intolerance of the pure, spirited, very young girl

She had the entirely feminine viewpoint and couldn't have borne even a random infidelity. That his spirit might remain wholly hers was not enough!

But she now pictured Vera and Ricky together. Vera would touch things with those arms about his yielding neck.

She would kiss him with surrender in her melting eyes. In this moment of his weakness and desire would Ricky remember Nell and his holy vows?

"God, let her not win! Let her not steal him from me!" she prayed, desolate.

She wrote a tender, imploring, rather pitiful response, reminding him of joys they had shared, begging him to stand by now and wait with her the coming of their child.

A week passed. It was the seventh of April. Neither answer nor money came. She went about half hysterical, almost in a faint with uncertainty and grief.

Something had happened to Ricky. Just a coincidence his letters stopped after Vera's arrival. Not for a moment did Nell really doubt him.

Even if he were angry and thought she jealously begrudged him a harmless joy, he would write. He would send money.

He knew her job was gone, knew her funds were alarmingly low. She sent frantic air mail over the apartment house inquiring for letters gone astray. There were none.

She sent an urgent, gentle, yearning message: "Write to me, my darling, for the days are black and lost when no word comes from you.

"I know you're working hard, but if you knew the suspense I suffer going down four flights of steps hoping for a letter, you'd write no matter how tired you were.

"You are not sick or hurt, are you? Let me know at once. I cannot sleep for worry."

"Why are you so excited, darling? I've written. I'm fine. Working a night shift to step up the funds. Please don't worry"

All my thought and love are yours. Keep a high heart. I'm with you every step of the way. Now and always. Letters follow. Yours, Ricky."

This was sent in a wire. Anxiously, Nell waited for his letters. She was down to her last $30.

Giddy Footsteps at Christmastide

Extra Mules Acceptable Always

By FRUNELLA WOOD

PRETTY novelties to dress up our toes make attractive Christmas presents, and they may be a lifesaver for the "last-minute" shopper who forgot to remember to do his (or her) Christmas shopping early.

Any woman loves extra mules to wear with negligee or hostess gown, and shoes of this type are designed with such gaiety that a gal doesn't have to have feet in the Tribby or Cinderella tradition to look at gift shoes without a blush.

THIS season the coin kid mules — silver or gold, of course — are in high, and the three models sketched from the top, to the right, are all made of this material. The fold-over sidas of the top number are pretty, and the ankle strap holds it on satisfactorily. The cutout sandal design, next below, has the T-strap which some women think the most flattering line for a slipper, and the high-heeled medieval mule third in line, is as smart and becoming a mule as has been shown yet for wear with extravant tea gowns.

* * *

The striped taffeta mule besides its new square toe and heel and its broad white fur cuff has a fur lining which will be a comfort on chilly floors.

The two outdoor boots sketched at bottom are marvelous gift stuff. At the left is one in thinnest black rubber, trimmed with a fur cuff, designed to wear with our afternoon dress-up ensemble. The one sketched right is a party boot for wear over evening slippers and is made of waterproofed velvet, which comes in evening color, Both its rubber sole and luxurious white fur trim are white

Killing An Ace

By Josephine Culbertson

The late Wilbur C. Whitehead used to say in emphasizing the value of honor combinations, "an Ace is an Ace."

By this apparently obvious statement, Mr. Whitehead really meant that only the most freakish of distributions could compensate a player for the lack of high cards.

That being so, it is a real treat to see a hand in which the only defense consists in losing an Ace deliberately while at the same time setting up a trick in the suit for declarer. All of this is done in the hand below to the discomfiture of the declarer.

The hand is freakish in character and the bidding was in keeping with the distribution.

There is little point, therefore, in repeating it except to announce that South's contract was five diamonds, West having overcalled in clubs.

The King of clubs was opened. East signalling negatively with the deuce. After a careful consideration of the dummy, however, the West player ignored the signal and led the club Ace.

Dummy was compelled to ruff, with the result that there could be no later entry to the hearts for spade discards.

When the hand was played, a trump was led at Trick 3 from the dummy and South was permitted to win.

Declarer then cashed the Ace of hearts and led a diamond honor, hoping East would duck once more. But East was too good a player to spoil the chance his brilliant partner had given him.

He won with the Ace and exited with the eight of trumps, after which declarer could not avoid losing a spade trick

HUGH BRINGS A STRANGE REQUEST

CHAPTER 220

HUGH GRANTLAND came slowly toward us, his eyes fixed upon me, and I suddenly realized that I had not seen him since the day when, half delirious, he had told Dicky and me that he was going out of our lives.

But it was not that of which he was thinking. I knew that as I saw his keen searching look give place to one of joyful satisfaction.

He had not seen me since my own collapse, and he was frankly jubilant over the complete recovery which my appearance indicated.

By the time he reached us—for he had to come the length of the living room—I had contrived to shelve my pique at the thought that Lillian had thought it necessary to warn me of Hugh's approach lest—I supposed—I might betray some agitation at meeting him. I flattered myself that my attitude was the acme of quiet, impersonal courtesy due a guest and old friend from his hostess, as I advanced a step and held out my hand to him.

A HOPELESS LOVE

"I am so glad to see you are so far on the road to recovery, Hugh," I said. "How is your shoulder?"

"Coming along splendidly, thank you," he said, in quick brusque accents. "But never mind that. Tell me how you are! I—we all might have known you were taxing your nerves and strength beyond all reason, but we were blind."

"I am discharged from medical custody as being disgustingly healthy," I said with a laugh. Both Dr. Braithwaite and his wife are a bit annoyed with me. I think, for spoiling their predictions of a possible nervous breakdown. But, really I never felt better in my life. And I am so glad you are also so far on your way to convalescence. But do tell me—how is Lee Chow? Lillian says his condition is serious.'

He turned on Lillian almost savagely

"Why did you tell her that?" he said. "She has been too ill to be bothered—"

LEE CHOW NEAR DEATH'

"My dear Hugh!" Lillian's tone was that of a teacher instructing a semi-moronic pupil. "She is not ill now, neither is she an infant in arms. And as she will see Lee Chow tomorrow and be able to judge his condition for herself, what is wrong with preparing her a bit for the shock?"

Hugh Grantland's perceptions are exceedingly keen, and neither Lillian's words nor her drawl nor the meaning which lay behind both escaped him. He swallowed hard, once, and then spoke in even, unemotional accents.

"You are right, of course—as always," he told her with a slight bow, and then turned to me.

"Lee Chow's condition is precarious," he said, still in even monotonous words, "and I am afraid it will be made more precarious by the granting of the request he has made. Yet there is no denying him, and Dr. Braithwaite just told me that, dangerous as the granting of the request may prove, it might be fatal just now to deny him anything upon which he has set his heart."

He paused hesitantly, and Lillian put the query for which he patiently was waiting.

"What is the request of his?"

A STRANGE REQUEST

"He wishes to be carried down to the library, to remain until after the ceremony of opening those envelopes is over. He says that the room where he is now is too small for everyone to be able to see the opening of the envelopes

"There are also changes which he wishes to make in the arrangement of the furniture in the library before the guests gather there tomorrow. It a great liberty, I know which he is taking, but he is a very sick man and—'

He had turned from Lillian to me with the last sentence, and I answered it quickly and curtly.

"Please don't talk nonsense," I said. "He is not taking any liberty, and we are all very glad to serve him I would attend to it myself, only I have promised Mrs. Braithwaite that I would remain absolutely idle during the week-end. But Lillian, you will—"

"Surest thing you know," Lillian said briskly. "Come along, Hugh, show me what you want done."

Health

Overeating Is Dangerous to a Person's Blood

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

NOWADAYS we hear a great deal about the dangers of faulty circulation of the blood. But these conversations are like Mark Twain's comment on the weather. "Everybody talks about it, but no one seems to do anything about it."

Certain disturbances of the circulation are unavoidable, but in the majority of cases they can be prevented.

Unfortunately, most victims of poor circulation do not consult the doctor until permanent damage has been done. This is too bad because many of the chronic ailments of adult life are due to neglect of disturbances in the circulation.

To understand how important the circulation is, it is necessary to know something about the functions of the blood vessels. The blood carries nourishment to every part of the body. Also it extracts oxygen from the lungs and waste products from the tissues.

The blood helps maintain the temperature of the body. It carries the secretions from the various glands and, in their turn, they regulate body activity. The blood takes up the poisons developed by disease and may actually carry the bacteria or germs of disease.

The blood is propelled through the blood vessels by the contraction of the heart. It is sent throughout the body and returns to the heart. This organ is ever at work and, if improperly cared for, may be damaged

REGULATE LIFE

You can see how vitally essential it is to care for the organ of circulation. It is clearly important to regulate one's life according to certain health fundamentals

Suppose we consider some of these: First, it is advisable never to overeat. Certain foods must be avoided if certain physical conditions are present. Eating hours should be at a definite time each day and followed by rest periods

All the health authorities warn against the rush of modern life. To insure good circulation it is necessary to avoid the nervous strain of hurry. Adequate hours of rest and relaxation are essential to the maintenance of good health.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Loves Him, But Will Wed Another

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

IT SEEMS there is only one girl in the world for me. Our long engagement was as distressing to me as it was to her, but there seemed to be no solution of our problem.

I lost a good job during the depression, and had to take anything that came along. She kept her job, which was a good one, and would have married me at one time and have paid the household expenses. But I was too much of a man for that.

I suppose she got tired of waiting, because she is 27 years of age, and has told me she must have some thought for the future. So she has become engaged to a man who is older, and a widower—very well fixed.

I loved this girl devotedly, and she was the same as my wife to me. She came to my house the other evening and wept, said she was very unhappy about what she intended to do, and asked me not to hate her.

LOUIS

It would be pretty hard for me to hand out any platitudes to the effect that you are better off without this girl, my dear Louis. You're a one-girl man, and during your long engagement got the same impression of her feeling for you. You were everything in the world to each other, and she has developed a more prudent side and intends to marry an older man with money.

That is, indeed, a bitter draught—but life goes on and we mortals have to go on with it. At first you will hate the sight of another woman, and everything she says and does will remind you of your former fiancee. But time is the great healer, and the days, weeks and months will make the wound smart less. If you have any fads or hobbies, don't neglect those. They will help enormously.

WEDDING RECEPTION IS BETTER TASTE IN THE BRIDE'S HOME

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We have a horrid, pokey little apartment, and I am marrying a man who is very well-to-do. His family connection is of the best, and they all have money. Naturally, I feel a little embarrassed at having a wedding reception in our apartment, which is very shabby and needs all sorts of new things—furniture, covers, draperies, rugs and whatnot.

His sister, who is my close friend, has offered me her home for the reception. Or would it be in better taste to be married in a traveling dress and go away immediately after the ceremony and have his sister give us a reception on our return?

MARGARET

Why not have a church wedding, be married in your traveling dress and go away immediately after the ceremony? That is absolutely conventional and in good taste.

It would not be in good taste to have a reception immediately after the ceremony at the home of the groom's sister. Instead, have her give you a reception when you return from your wedding tour.

SHALL SHE CONFESS HER LOVE?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Mr. hasn't even told me that he is interested in me, but he seems to like my company, whenever I go out with him.

But that has been only three or four times. However, whenever I go, I fall deeper and deeper in love. Do you advise me to tell him? I'm 18, and he's in his early twenties.

GIRL IN LOVE

As the young man has never told you he cares for you, it would be pretty risky, it seems to me, for you to come out with a declaration of love. When it comes to proposing and telling a man how much you care, it must be done with all the tact and finesse of a magician.

Of course, a good many women do propose, but they do it so subtly and skillfully that the man is certain it is he who has popped the question.

BOTH TRIED TO GET EVEN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We had a little spat the other night, though we're both in love and have been going together for two years. To make him jealous I told him I met a boy he doesn't like and talked with him for fifteen minutes. That was a lie. To get even with me, he now insists on going out one night with another girl, though I confessed it wasn't true I had been talking to this boy he didn't like.

I've forgiven him about the spat and wish he'd forgive me.

P. O. D.

What would true love be without its spats, quarrels, and little reservations? If these things don't happen, where would be the joy of making up? I'm sure, by the time you see this in print, you will have made up and forgotten all about your troubles.

Culottes For North or South

By ANNICE BRINK

Although it is shown in heavy dinen for Southern resorts, this Tyrolean play suit, featuring the culotte, or divided skirt, could be made of jersey or light gabardine and plunge right through a good deep snowdrift. Don't be misled by its "specialty shop" air, for it can be made at home. Pictorial Review created the pattern, which is No. 8070. Claudia Morgan, daughter of Frank Morgan, famous stage star, models it. It's two-piece, with a short fitted jacket and a braided collar, and challenges your ingenuity in finding buttons to carry on its peasant inspiration. If you wish to know the Boston shops which stock this new pattern, phone (LIBerty 4000) or write Annice Brink, Fashion Editor.

Exhilarating COLOGNE Especially FOR MEN

By Arline Gould

THERE'S NO surer way of pleasing a man than to give him a Christmas gift that's an out-and-out tribute to his good taste and discrimination.

When we think of some of the Yuletide offerings we've showered upon men in the past (and the scant praise we received in return) it is any wonder we blush all over.

No matter how wise you think you are in the matter of selecting a gift for "him," you can't possibly know of all the smart answers this season.

One such that is as masculine as a polo mallet and terribly smart, is a handsome glass flask of men's eau de cologne. It has a wooden top, boasts a fragrance typically masculine and is the peak of modernity and good taste.

It's always a temptation to let our editorial ravings get the better of us when it comes to an item of this sort, as all we are going to say is that if you are really serious about finding a gift to please your men-folk, don't pass this one up.

It costs but one dollar for a large bottle and it's worth it—down to the last drop. It's a Christmas gift that deserves top place on your shopping list and one that any man would give a genuine I-thank-you.

To learn the name of this eau de cologne which is made especially for men and which comes in a smart glass flask with wooden stopper, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ELSIE:

"I am making a scrapbook of 'Listen, World!' to leave to my young daughter," —Says So. Duxbury Woman

Mrs. Madeleine H. Baker, South Duxbury, writes:

Dear Elsie:

No words are adequate to say how much comfort, help and breadth of vision comes to hundreds of people who look for and read your column daily.

I have hundreds of your articles saved, and am making a scrap-book to leave to my daughter.

It is more than a philosophy; it is a religion, science, romance, understanding, life itself — its heights and depths. Anyone possessing it could never be completely down—or out.

Food Surprises Packed With Nutrition

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WAAB

WITH ALL THE confusion of Christmas, are you neglecting your vitamins and minerals? We are apt to get lost in plum puddings, fruit cakes and candies, and it is with a sigh of relief—a little one—that we suggest some everyday recipes for vegetables and salads.

Talking to a young business girl who keeps bachelor quarters we were reminded that it isn't the new tricky things people always want but the simple little suggestion that make cooking and serving a meal easy.

"Why do peas discolor and why are carrots wishy-washy" were a few of the things she asked. Again we repeat cook vegetables for as short a time as possible. Peas and carrots can be cooked successfully either with or without the addition of water. If peas are cooked without water—and do try it—melt butter, add a little chopped onion and the carrots, sliced. Cover and steam for ten minutes until tender. Shake the pan occasionally to keep the vegetable from sticking. Or try combining the two vegetables for a gay party looking dish flavored with mint.

The same business girl was greatly interested to know that tomatoes can be cut in halves, the blossom end removed, then placed on the broiler and sprinkled with buttered bread crumbs and broiled along with steak or chops. Leftover potatoes can be broiled in the same way if spread with butter and sugar or wrapped with bacon. Pineapple, peaches, bananas or apricots broiled in the same way add a gay touch to the popular grilled meal which is so easy for the bachelor girl to prepare.

GLAZED MINTED CARROTS WITH PEAS

6 medium-sized carrots
¼ cup butter
¼ cup granulated sugar
1 tablespoon mint leaves, chopped
1½ cups fresh peas, cooked
Salt
Pepper

Cut carrots into long strips and cook in boiling water about 15 minutes. Drain. Melt butter in skillet, add sugar and stir until dissolved. Add chopped mint and carrots. Cook until soft and a good brown but pray with salt and pepper. Serve surrounded by glazed carrots. Serves 6.

LIMA-WALDORF SALAD

1 cup lima beans, cooked
1 cup tart apples, diced
½ cup nuts, chopped
1 cup celery, diced
6 sweet pickles, chopped
¼ cup French dressing
Lettuce
Russian dressing

Marinate lima beans, apple celery, nuts and pickles in French dressing for about ½ hour in refrigerator. When ready to serve, drain off excess dressing, place salad on bed of lettuce and serve with Russian dressing. Serves 6.

Fashion Flashes

IF YOU are not sure of a friend's taste in color or period, one of the safest gifts you can make for her home is crystal, advises Helen Koues, director of Good Housekeeping Studio.

Crystal fits into any background, and has no quarrel with any decorating school, and it gives a lovely lightness and sparkle.

The stores have charming crystal offerings this year, not beyond the average woman's budget. For instance, a pair of crystal vases add charm to any room, and they are lovely when filled with flowers. You can get them in all shapes, but one of the quaintest is a pair shaped like an inverted high hat. For the dressing room nothing's lovelier than a lamp with a crystal base and opaline parchment shade in white, peach, yellow or pale green.

A plate of silver lustre mirror or plain crystal is just the thing for serving sandwiches and hors d'oeuvres. Another suggestion is a crystal relish set with four separate glass dishes, fitted in a tray, or a crystal cigarette jar and four ash trays with a star design on the bottom of each tray as well as on the cover of the jar.

Party Fun With Scrambled Words

SCRAMBLED WORDS!

Or, as some say, anasagrams!

They'll be a hit at your next party, especially if you get a list of really hard ones, and give your guests only one minute to do a dozen.

An anasagram, you know, is all the letters of a word arranged in the wrong order, so that it looks like the Cherokee word for chewing gum. You discover the real word that the jumbled letters spell.

"Oliral," mutters Fran, chewing away on her pencil at Julie's party, and she's so busy wondering whether the animal is related to a muskrat that she never notices that she could rearrange the letters so they would spell "tailor."

The "reedrang" is another queer beastie, whose true name she may discover to be "gardener," if Jeff doesn't call "time" on her before she's alphabet-grogxy.

The "usashq" is a mighty strange variety of "squssh," and the "tikles" would suggest a banjo rather than a "skillet."

If Fran is able to untangle the "gincra" and the "kanreb" and the "lisipiw" and the "selimiote" and a few more like that before the whistle blows, she'll deserve the prize of a trick pencil or a pocket dictionary. Or she may just win the booby prize of a box of headache tablets!

Anyway, the fun will go on with conundrums, and side-splitting stunts, and maybe a charade or two. Then it will be time for refreshments, for that delicious Fairy Fruit Salad, and the most luscious open-faced sandwiches and rose-frosted angel cake you ever set tooth in, and plenty of hot coffee and chocolate.

Beeckman on Manners

By MRS. BEECKMAN

CONGRATULATORY NOTE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A man friend of mine whom I haven't seen in quite some time, has recently been married, and has sent me an announcement of his marriage. Should I just send him a card congratulating him or write a short note? I have never met his wife.

A.

Don't send him a ready-made card of congratulation . . . that should never be done. But it would be correct for you (and I'm sure very welcome to him) to write him a friendly note of congratulation and best wishes.

We all like to have such important milestones in our lives taken notice of by our friends. It does seem unconcerned of our friends not to show interest about such a significant occasion, especially when we make the bow of sending them an announcement.

LADIES FIRST

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a couple is about to pass through a revolving door, who goes first, the lady or the gentleman?

M.

The man stands nearer the revolving door so that he may be in position to help the woman as she enters the door compartment.

If the door is not at the moment revolving after a previous passenger" he gives a slight push to the farther side of the door compartment to give it a "head start." Then he enters the next compartment.

AUSTEN LAKE — SLUGGER DISSATISFIED WITH CONTRACT

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
20 BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1935

Yawkey, Red Sox Hunt Master, Bags His Foxx

THE REST of the American League might save itself some suffering by squawking "Uncle" and voting Tom Yawkey a couple of courtesy pennants, before the rich, impetuous young man buys up a whole sequence of them and keeps championship flags floating from his grandstand roof as so much bunting or standard bits of trim.

Austen Lake

Tom's spending mania, of which his purchase of Jimmy Foxx and Johnny Marcum is part of his Christmas shopping schedule, is slowly but infallibly forming the perfect baseball team.

This may resolve future seasons into a monotonous round of victories and make Boston fans yearn wearily for the good old times when triumphs were novelties and the club booted the ball around in a hilarious succession of flops and flounders that were treats to the eye.

It takes a little imagining to picture Boston as victory-worn. Because the people are very pennant famished after years of living off the game's husks and rinds. And even now they were getting a little over-expectant of Yawkey, so that the curbstone reply to his purchase of Foxx and Marcum, is, "Yeah, and what else?"

The people have learned not to be surprised.

I am projecting my mind into the future, when Yawkey's perfect baseball team will be knocking over the other seven league teams, as the old Red Sox used to be knocked over when the club was manned by nursery midgets and Bob Quinn was their paternal daddy who ran around with a mouthful of safety pins lest the lads slip their breechclouts.

* * *

Spending to Sox Over the Hill

JOE CRONIN'S MANAGERIAL character is endangered by the coming of Foxx and Marcum. Because the Boston fans, who let out irritable whoops at Joe last year for small reason, are apt to be pretty surly if Joe does not wade out and fetch the 1936 pennant in. So, if things go sour, bleacher bleats and frog choruses, which bounced off the outfield fences in the gloomy days of Carrigan, Fohl, Wagner and McManus, may be revived by ear and hooted again from memory.

If Joe has luck and nobody comes up with spring halt, spavin, chipped elbows or any muscular diseases, it will be some sport to see the boys go whizzing down the September stretch with Jimmy splashing home runs over the advertising, and Lefty and Wes a-blowing the little white pea past the batters and the people planning a grand, emotional World Series jag.

But there I go, dreaming this as the perfect baseball team, when everybody knows that there are still cavities in the outfield to fill, and a couple of missing pickets to mend. And while I do not want to appear to look a gift horse clear down into that region which Governor Curley, in his parson's voice, describes as the "larynx," still Detroit has stood off Yawkey's Christmas gift of Foxx by buying an equally lavish present in Al Simmons for its rabid following. And lest Tom slur Boston as any less rabid or hysterical than Detroit, I suggest that he spend a few more shovelfuls for Roger Cramer and Eric McNair, before he sails up his cash barrels for the winter.

Because the aldering joints of such athletes as Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg, Joe Cronin and others, will be losing some of their natural lubricating oils in a few more seasons, and the time to spend toward a pennant is while the boys are still fresh.

* * *

Bob Comes to Convert Old Heathen

IT IS A COINCIDENCE, too, that in the midst of Sox' moment of pennant glory, Bob Quinn, the old master when Fenway Park was a tumbledown poorhouse, has been confirmed as the new Braves' president.

Some time next week when Bob moves his luggage into the attic offices and mix down in the musty sanctum that used to be Judge Fuchs'. I suspect he will lock the door for a bit and commune over the queer twist which fortune has wrought.

Because in the former time when Bob was boss on Jersey street and Fuchs was host in Gaffney street, the two enjoyed a mutual mistrust and suspicion that fizzed up in telephone bickerings and oral assault. So that they had their tailfeathers up most of the time, like outraged farm hens. And to Bob, Braves Field was unhallowed soil inhabited by heathen Chinee.

Yet sometimes, to forget his Red Sox woes and worries, he would come across Commonwealth avenue and study the Braves' worries from the backstoops of the big grandstand trainshed. And, in the bosom of his Fenway family group, he would let his shrewd eyes rove over the doings and speak his mind about this athlete and that, little confidential truths that never got in the papers lest they throw the judge in another uproar.

* * *

BOB, OF COURSE, HAD an inkling of the little trick that would some day make him master of the Braves and put the players' fate in his capacious paw. So, his drowsy summer chat would rumble on and on, saying candid confidences that must remain buried here. Yet, I recall when Brooklyn was visiting one day that he spoke grumpy criticism of Max Carey, then the team's field boss. So that later, when Bob moved to Brooklyn, as keeper of the keys, it was not long before he had Max's hide over the fence.

One Braves' matter he had great admiration for, and that was Bill McKechnie's type of management. And once Bob said that, in the undistinguished field of major league pilots, there were only four who deserved honorable mention. And, ranked in his order of reckoning, these were McKechnie, Connie Mack, McGraw and Hornsby.

As a sympathetic witness to his distress when he was scraping the bottom of the bin and pawning his life insurance to meet his Red Sox payrolls, I once boarded the late Ernest Barnard, then American League president, and asked him what the league proposed to do for the club. And Barnard's grunt answer had been, "Nothing! Each club is an independent promotion, subject to its own ends."

So Bob, though he had spent a small lifetime in the league, had no helping hand and left Boston naked of funds and with nothing but a Puritan reputation. Now, in coming back on the other side of the fence, the National League has covertly agreed to throw any loose playing material his way and to help rebuild what, through previous extravagance, is the soft spot of the circuit.

So that Bob may recover the fortune on the Braves side of Commonwealth avenue that he dropped on the Red Sox, and Lady Luck, the Spanish lads, who jilted him scandalously in his old plant, may learn to call him sweetheart in his new.

Down the Years With New Sox Slugger

FOXX RECEIVES LETTER FROM HOME RUN BAKER

JIMMY GETS FIRST BIG CHANCE AS CATCHER

Wife Dismayed by Boston Move

Plans to Stay in Philly

By Alan C. Fraser
Boston American Staff Correspondent

Philadelphia, Dec. 11—In his $18,000 home, with eleven rooms and three tiled baths, Jimmy Foxx walked his chubby bulk restlessly around the living room excited about the trade that sends him to the Red Sox, and eager for a salary chat with Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins.

But Mrs. Foxx was a bit dismayed.

Jimmy's wife thinks she will continue to live in the beautiful home out in Jenkintown Manor, which they bought and furnished only a year ago.

So when Jimmy goes up to Fenway Park to do his first-basing and home-run smacking, Mrs. Foxx and Jimmy, Jr., 6, will stay behind—Until the World Series.

Because there was boundless faith in the Foxx home today that the Red Sox are going to be in the World Series next fall.

Other Deals Ahead

Not only because Jimmy is going there, but because of the purchasing power of the Yawkey bankroll and the selecting ability of Lieutenant Collins.

"There are some other deals on the fire," said Jimmy. "If they go through the other clubs are going to have a hell of a time stopping us."

Consummation of the deal after all those weeks of rumor took a load off Jimmy's mind, but leaves the salary matter still dangling there.

Jimmy told me he is under contract for two more years, and his Philadelphia Athletics contract goes right along to Boston, with him. But he has ideas.

"I happened along into the big leagues at the tail-end of the boom period," he said.

"Those other fellows who got in a little earlier got the benefits of the high pay that Babe Ruth and the general business prosperity established.

Missed Big Pay

"I never got anything like some of the stars, and the local club was on the way down hill.

"I signed a contract a year ago for three years because naturally to a ball player or anybody else, three years of security looks pretty good.

"A man under contract is a man who has made an agreement but I expect to have a conference with Mr. Yawkey and Eddie Collins as soon as they get around to the point of sending for me. I expect they will get in touch with me. I haven't even received official notice of the deal yet, you know."

When he was pressed for a figure, he refused to state his price and said

"There won't be any trouble. Whatever they do will satisfy me. But I have some business interests and a radio contract here that will have to be adjusted so I won't lost money going to Boston."

Likes Boston

As for playing ball in Boston, Jimmy was very enthusiastic

"There's no place I'd rather be playing ball in than Boston," he said. "It looks like we're going to have a fine team. I hope to have a great year. In a few years they'll be calling me Old Man Foxx, but in the meantime maybe there's a few home runs left in my sticks."

Jimmy is only 28. "Home Run" Baker, the old Athletics star, gave him his start down in Sudlersville, Md., when he was only 17 and he was a catcher on the Providence, R. I., club when he was 18.

This reporter, being a baseball fan but forgetful of his statistics, asked James Emory Foxx if he thought he could outhit Frank Greenberg next year, and James Emory shot right back

"What do you mean? Didn't I do it this year?"

And so we went into the figures, and it turned out that Jimmy tied Hank with 36 home runs by the time the season ended, although at one time he was 12 homers behind the Detroit star.

"If you will excuse my meaning it," added Jimmy, "I believe I finished 10 points or so in the averages higher than both Hank and Lou Gehrig."

Hose Have Chance

What about the Boston club as a whole?

"Looks as if we're going to have a well-rounded club," he said. "Great possibilities. If Tom Yawkey gets what he wants, and it looks as if he's going to, I think you'll see a World Series in Boston."

I asked Jimmy if he had any choice, during the weeks of trade-mongering, as to whether he would rather go to Boston or the Chicago White Sox or some other particular club. It turned out that Jimmy likes Boston best.

"Truthfully, I wanted to go to Boston all along, if I was going to be traded, and I knew I was going to be traded," he said.

"It's a fine baseball city. And then they've got the best chance to get in the money. A ball player gets too old for the game when he's still pretty young, and don't let any of them tell you they don't think of the money."

He said his associations with Eddie Collins had been very pleasant and that they were very good friends. As for Yawkey, he said he has known the Red Sox owner ever since Yawkey bought the Boston team and knows him to be "a very good sport."

Swanky Suburb

The home-run hitter and his wife were going out to play bridge. Their home is a stone colonial mansion on Wellington road in a swanky northern suburb that abounds in country clubs.

Mrs. Foxx is the former Helen Helte of Dover, Del., and she and Jimmy were married at Church Hill, Md., December 27, 1926. . . .

"I go quite often to see my husband play, and like to watch the play on ball, but if it isn't his day, I don't complain," she said.

What does she think about the Boston trade?

"I don't think about it. It's part of my husband's business," she said. "But we only bought this house a year ago and I think I'll continue to live right here."

RED SOX Flag Club on PAPER

By Joe Cashman

The man on Washington, Tremont and Summer streets is now marshalling facts and figures trying to decide whether the acquisition of Jimmy Foxx and Johnny Marcum insures the Red Sox the pennant which so far has eluded a $3,000,000 clutch by Marse Tom Yawkey.

Judging from records of the past season, the Fenway flock would seem to have cinched the 1936 flag when they put over the deal for the Philadelphia pair.

To a club that finished in fourth place have been added a first-sacker, in Foxx, who hits 100 points more than Babe Dahlgren and a pitcher, in Marcum, who won 16 games, to replace Dusty Rhodes, who turned in but two victories.

If Foxx and Marcum had been Fenwayites during the 1935 race the Sox probably would have walked off with the championship.

No Flag System

That the Sox management realizes all this is evident from the admission that it hopes to add still more strength to the club.

It's all but official that the purchase of Roger Cramer and possibly Eric McNair from the A's will be announced by Yawkey around New Year.

Confirmation of this transaction wouldn't be smart at present, what with the Fenway foreman trying to pry loose a star pitcher—either Oral Hildebrand or Monte Pearson—from the Indians in exchange for Outfielder Roy Johnson.

For, you see, a hitter value can be placed on Johnson than would be possible were the acquisition of Cramer verified. Roy can now be offered as the Sox outstanding flychaser whose passing would leave a big garden gap at the Fens. His worth, however, would shrink plenty if Cramer's name were on the local roster.

Yanks in Market

Since the Yankees are also in the market for a Cleveland pitcher, it may be that the Sox will fall in that quest. Yet, if they do, they'll turn right around and use Johnson as bait in another attempt to get Ben Chapman from the Yankees.

You can set it down that Roger Cramer will be the Sox regular centerfielder next season.

That will give the man on Washington, Tremont and Summer streets more figuring to do.

If he reaches the conclusion that part of the 1936 World Series will be staked on Jersey street, few will argue with him.

And with an even share in luck, it should bring Boston its first championship since 1918.

'Home-Run' Baker Hears of Foxx

GIVES JIMMY CHANCE

SYNOPSIS

In the opening installment of his series, Jimmy Foxx explained how each player must work out his own problems, learning how to utilize his own particular physical equipment and talents.

The new Red Sox first sacker stressed the importance of strong hands, wrists and forearms, the good batter thereby meeting the ball squarely with a resounding blow.

His early days were spent on his dad's Maryland farm, milking, plowing, walking five miles back and forth to school, shouting, laughing and even fighting with the neighborhood pack, proud of his strength and taking boyish delight in turning down the hands of the older boys with a quick snap of the wrist that had been made hard by years of milking.

By JIMMY FOXX
(As told to Austen Lake)

CHAPTER II

I recall hearing Eddie Collins, now my office boss with the Red Sox, but then coach of the Athletics, say: "Good fielders are made, but good hitters are born."

"Batting instinct" may be a good way to describe it. Men who possess it, like Ruth, Hornsby, Klein, Simmons, Cochrane, Terry and others, will always be found on or above the .300 line, despite their slumps and depressions. Such men were born with a close hookup between sight and sense and are able to translate thought into movement faster and a little more accurately than the average.

Not only that, but great hitters never lose the knack, even after their other physical powers have faded and when it is no longer possible for them to field the ball or to throw it with speed and accuracy.

A short while ago I stopped off at Pittsburgh and watched Old Honus Wagner, the Pirate shortstop of 20-odd years ago, who must be nearly 60 now. Honus was still playing with his team of semi-professional barnstormers, and while I watched, the bandy-legged, grizzled old man hit two screaming drives that went for three-baggers despite his shaky legs that held his pace on the bases down to a dog trot.

And I'll bet that, 20 years from now, after a little practice, Ty Cobb will be able to step up and sock out base hits with the best, although since returning Ty, unlike Honus, has been trying to keep his mind off baseball and to find new interests.

But whatever a boy's talent for batting, remember that a lad who makes the most of indifferent abilities is apt to surpass the one who neglects richer ones and, in the end, will get further along in the game. For there is no royal road to good batting other than constantly keeping at it until the bat fairly becomes a part of your arms and you know to a hair's breadth how to control it.

Many "Stars" Undiscovered

I believe that there are lots of potential Babe Ruths and Jimmy Foxxs around the country who, if fate had given them the opportunity to discover their natural gifts, might be well known and as well paid today as we are instead of having to drive trucks, work a farm, or carry a salesman's satchel.

I am wondering what might have happened to Babe Ruth if Brother Gilbert had not picked him up as a stray street urchin in Baltimore and taken him to St. Mary's Parochial School, where he had his first chance to play baseball. Or what path in life I might have followed had not Frank Baker accidentally picked me off the Sudlersville lots and introduced me to the tap roots of professional ball. Babe might now be driving one of the trucks under

ALL-STAR Game for BOSTON

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 11—Major league magnates appear to have saved no ammunition for the final sessions of their annual two-day winter meetings here today.

The Red Sox bought Jimmy Foxx and Johnny Marcum from the Athletics.

The Braves franchise has been turned over to Bob Quinn, the Texas baron. Al Simmons from the White Sox, the American League voted unanimously against night ball and the 1936 All-Star game was awarded to Braves Field, Boston, all on the opening day.

Of course, the David Harums continue buzzing like so many bees and may accomplish something worth writing home about.

The White Sox would like to get Sammy West from the Browns to fill the outfield hole left by the departure of Simmons to Detroit. But the Pale Hose want to give only cash in exchange and Rogers Hornsby, canny Mound City pilot, insists on getting players as well as money.

Braves Busy

In the event the Indians won't listen to either offer, the Pilots Joe have a proposition (of their own). The Red Sox would give the Yanks Johnson and Dib Williams, utility infielder, for Outfielder Ben Chapman.

On the National League side of the fence, the Braves appear the most anxious to do some swapping now that their front office has been set straight.

Manager Bill McKechnie is considering a Pirate bid for Hal Lee, offers from the Cards and Cubs for Fred Frankhouse and propositions from several rivals for Wally Berger and Ed Brandt.

Some fear had been felt that the annual all-star game might not get National League approval but the senior circuit magnates lost no time in expressing their willingness to participate and agreeing to the game being staged in Boston. The National Leaguers appeared to be in a very happy mood over the solution of the Braves muddle The tangle had been getting on their nerves for over a year. They have implicit faith in Bob Quinn's ability to put the Braves back on its feet with the financial assistance of Charles F. Adams.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

IF RAY STEELE had a smart manager, the Californian heavyweight would today be billed as world's wrestling champion. Steele clashed with Danno O'Mahoney at Minneapolis early in the fall. Neither wrestler was able to score a fall after an hour of grappling, and the contest was declared a draw.

If Steele had been managed at the time by one of the super plots of the wrestling game, he would have been set up as a champion. It would have been argued that he had as good a claim to the title as O'Mahoney in view of the fact that the Irishman had been unable to throw him.

I can imagine how Jack Kearns, Johnny Buckley, Joe Jacobs, Dan Carroll or Jimmy Bronson would act if a boxer under his management held a champion to a draw. They would talk so loud and with such force that you would forget all about the title holder.

Steele later pinned King Levinsky, heavyweight boxer in 30 seconds in a mixed contest held in St. Louis. This was also something to cheer about.

Steele will be knocking on the door of the Hall of Fame again on Friday night when he clashes with O'Mahoney in a title bout at the Garden. There is a two-hour time limit on the contest under the new ruling of the American Association rules. But Steele says he will put the Irishman a couple of times within the two hours.

Mr. Boston

HANS STEINKE

Jack Curley and other wrestling kings in New York are contemplating a mixed bout between the world's championship wrestler and Joe Louis in the event the latter beats Jimmy Braddock for the boxing crown. It isn't any secret they would be more confident of the ultimate result if they had Steele as their standard bearer. As a result, the Curley-Londos-Dusek faction in the wrestling game will be pooling for Steele to defeat Danno on Friday night.

HANS Steinke, German heavyweight, will also appear on Friday night's card with Leo Numa as an opponent. Steinke is anxious to secure a bout with the winner of the O'Mahoney-Steele go. Numa recently gave O'Mahoney a hard battle at the Garden.

In the preliminaries Billy Bartsch will oppose Stanley Sitkowski, Michael Debrow will battle Dominick Petrosf, Dick Raines will clash with Lloyd Marshall, Count Zarynoff will take on John Spellman, while Henri Piret will coincide with Chief Little Moose.

NOTRE DAME

MARTY Brill, who will be in the backfield for the All-Notre Dame eleven as they battle the Collegiate All-Stars at the Garden tonight spoke with great enthusiasm of the days he was with Knute Rockne's team at South Bend, Indiana.

"They talk a great deal about the color of Notre Dame," said Brill, "but it didn't have any particular brand of showmanship. We just won football games and the public turned out to see how we did it.

"We had four elevens in our varsity squad. Then there was the B squad which was composed of four more elevens. Rockne schooled his new players on the B squad and moved them up to the varsity after they got the necessary experience.

"I got my greatest football thrill at Notre Dame the day we beat the University of Pennsylvania. I originally went to Pennsylvania and got tired of watching football games from the bench.

"I changed over to Notre Dame where I was schooled as a defensive back. In the Pennsylvania game, I asked Rock to let me try my stuff as a running back. I wanted to score some touchdowns against Pennsylvania. Rock granted my request and I scored four or five touchdowns, and was the happiest person in Philadelphia, my home town, after the game.

"I look for plenty of excitement in the game at the Garden tonight. Our Notre Dame team has won five straight games, and we are confident we shall make it six straight tonight."

The gridiron classic between the colorful All-Notre Dame eleven and the collegiate All-Stars has made a wide appeal to the public. It is expected that the Garden will be jammed to capacity when the rival elevens go into action. You will witness the tops in football in this unusual offering.

PAULINO

THERE is no doubt in my mind about Paulino, who clashes with Joe Louis in a 15-round bout in the New York Garden on Friday night, being the toughest heavyweight in the world. He has been standing up in front of enemy punches for 15 years and at the age of 36 is still grinning.

I don't think Paulino will be grinning when he's bout with Louis ends. The "Brown Bomber" is likely to hand Paulino his first knockout. It is possible Paulino may not be counted out, but it is almost a certainty if the "Bomber" fails to put over a sleep a mash that he will cut the Basque up so much that the referee will halt the contest.

Ring Results

OWEN APOLOGIZES FOR GRID CHARGES

WIRES Denial to IRISH

Charge Arouses Colleges of Country

By BILL GRIMES

Declaring that he had been sadly misquoted, Professor George Owen, Sr., of M. I. T., father of Harvard's famed nine-letter athlete, today wired an apology to Notre Dame over his purported charge that football players of that institution are paid hirelings.

Owen's telegram was dispatched after the Rev. John F. O'Hara, president of the University of Notre Dame, had demanded proof of professionalism "if you made this statement."

In reply, Owen sent this wire:

"In reply to your wire of December 10, I have been sadly misquoted. If any statement I have made is untrue, I deeply apologize and regret any embarrassment it may have caused you."

But after revealing his answer Owen, in the next breath reiterated every statement he made yesterday and that went so far as to rope in Brown and Western Maryland.

STORM OF PROTEST

Owen did admit, however, that he had no positive proof to substantiate his declarations. His views were personal observations, which he had been gathering for years.

"It seems to me that the only pure college teams are those which have terrible football eleven" commented Professor Owen, this morning.

"It may be only a coincidence but it seems strange to me that Western Maryland with an enrollment of only 300 boys should have such outstanding material, while Harvard with its wealth and large enrollment has been so bad.

"Colleges that subsidize and try to hide it are immoral. Forget the hypocrisy and pay players in the open. You don't get major college teams by accident.

PURELY PERSONAL

"But, as I said before, my statements are purely personal, befuddling brines about many evils and where I just wanted to show that Bob Haley was merely an unfortunate victim of circumstances, it now makes him appear as a criminal. Haley's dad called me and I don't blame him for feeling as he does.

"Sure, you and I know that Dick Harlow will be out as Harvard football coach unless he beats Yale within the next two years. That's what happened to Eddie Casey and others before him.

"The same held true for Jackson Cannell at Dartmouth. When he failed to deliver, a newcomer was selected to win major objectives.

"Brown had a poor season this year. Yet it has a fine freshman team. How come? I know of a couple of personal acquaintances who have been taken under a sheltering wing recently at Brown.

"Oftentimes it isn't the coach who is responsible for taking care of athletics. He may not know anything about it. The faculty manager may not know, either. But, who knows but what gamblers, big time bettors, are making it possible for some great athlete to go through a certain college and thereby getting valuable information.

"I don't wonder that Father O'Hara is offended by the reports as printed. I was so dreadfully misquoted.

"My remarks, as I said before, are a matter of opinion as generally accepted by the public and not known facts."

Friendships resumed. Marty Brill, former brilliant Notre Dame halfback, is shown above with Miss Celesta Callahan. Marty will be one of the big attractions tonight.

MEMORIES OF GRIDIRON'S FAMOUS ROCKNE

All-Stars Choice to Upset Invaders

For many years New England football enthusiasts have been close followers of Notre Dame football campaigns. They have traveled hundreds of mile to watch the Irish in action.

Tonight they have an opportunity to see some of the most famous of all time Notre Dame players at the Boston Garden, where the ex-Ramblers take on the All-Eastern Collegiates in the first indoor football game ever played here.

For the most part, the crowd that trans to the Garden tonight has seen Notre Dame games but there will be hundreds who have not been so fortunate.

Although some of the players have not been through recent campaigns for two or three years, there is still a thrill in seeing such stars as Frank Carideo, Marty Brill, Hucky O'Connor, Hugh Devore, Bud Bonar and "One Play" O'Brien.

Irish Fit

The Notre Dame squad is in fine physical condition and just rarin to go. Coach Andy Kerr has his Ramblers all keyed up for tonight's battle and it will be a battle from the opening kickoff.

The ex-South Benders cannot afford to be tipped over by the Eastern Collegiates for they are planning to tour the country playing indoors during the winter months.

Due to the fact that most of the publicity has been written around the Notre Dame angle, there has been a very healthy advance sale of tickets. But the All Eastern Collegiates will not be a push over.

Rams in Action

When the Notre Dame squad scrapped Captain Joe Maniaci and Al Sabo of Fordham were with the party. Maniaci is one of the greatest all around backs in the college ranks. He's a six-foot two hundred pounder, with an abundance of speed and power and it will require all of the technique at the disposal of the Notre Dame eleven to stop him tonight.

In Bob Haley, the ex-Harvard captain, the Eastern Collegiates have a truly great field general who will match wits with ever Frank Carideo.

Superintendent Bob Murphy and his crew had the Garden in readiness for tonight's game at noon today and although the playing surface is 20 yards shorter than the regulation field, the setup has all the appearance of a college football gridiron. The turf is firm and there doubtless will be some sensational runs pulled off during the game.

Bingham Defends Football Code

New Haven Conn., Dec. 11 (AP)—William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard and a member of the football rules committee said tonight that the gridiron code could not be blamed for the large number of football injuries during the past season.

Speaking on a nine-point program designed to prevent high school injuries, the New England representative on the national rules committee asserted he was satisfied the goal-posts ought to remain where they are and there was no indication of the so-called "slow-whistle" among officials.

He opposed, however, a few minor rules changes for high schools now in force in mid-western cities. Prof. Clifford Brownell of Columbia University placed the blame for football injuries to high school athletes directly on the community.

BOSTON Stars Face PITTSMEN

By Murray Kramer

The Boston Trojans who oppose Alabama Pitts and his All Stars at the Boston Arena tomorrow night will be composed entirely of local boys.

Feeling that one of the big reasons for the failure of professional basketball in this town has been the absence of boys from this section, Sam Snyder has selected his squad from hoopsters who are well known to county fans in this section.

REPEAL, IN 3RD, WILSON'S BEST

Billowy Wave on the Crest

By Dave Wilson
(Selections made for heavy track)
BEST BET—REPEAL

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 11—Rep'al, a sup'rior mudder, will have a track and race made to order for her in the seven furlongs of the third stanza. This mare turned in a corking performance in placing to Waswanappi in her most recent endeavor.

FIRST—BILLOWY WAVE, LODORUS, RED LABEL
BILLOWY WAVE ran for the well-known Sweeney last time. The Black Servant colt is dropping down a long ways and will be racing over a strip made to order. LODORUS figures to offer the contention. RED LABEL figures close up on the strength of a recent timing performance.

SECOND—MISS PATCHES, BRIGHT SKIRT, WEE BROOM
Anything can happen in this wide-open affair. The winner may turn up in MISS PATCHES. BRIGHT SKIRT comes highly recommended by the Clocker. WEE BROOM will be all dangerous if given a chance to perform

THIRD—REPEAL, TELL IT, MANUAL
REPEAL needs only intelligent handing in order to lead this lot of lowly platers under the imaginary wire. Contention, if any, will likely be furnished by TELL IT. MANUAL holds some class and should head the others.

FOURTH RACE—COUNT ADRAIN, SKIMALONG, FOGGY DAWN
String along with COUNT ADRAIN in this number. This clever muddler pulled up to a similar field only a few days back. SKIMALONG and FOGGY DAWN are the main dangers.

FIFTH RACE—DARK LOVLINESS, LUKE PHANTOM, LOCH LONDON
DARK LOVLINESS' most recent endeavor should be tossed in the ash can. She was pitted too ambitiously that day. She merely galloped to a similar field in a previous race. LUKE PHANTOM, if started, figures to offer the contention. LOCH LONDON holds plenty of early foot and may steal the whole pot

SIXTH—MARGE, FOOT BRIGADE, IRISH VOTE
MARGE gets the top figures on the strength of her last corking effort. She is a three-star muddler. FOOT BRIGADE, a slow beginner figures to be along in time to save the place from IRISH VOTE.

SEVENTH—LATIVICH, GOLDEN PLAY, VENNIE H.
YATIVICH, a galloping winner on Tuesday, needs only to run back to that race in order to again earn brackets. GOLDEN PLAY figures next best on the strength of an excellent third to Worthington. VENNIE H. moves up in the going

AFTER THE BRAWL WAS OVER ON GARDEN ICE

Peace descends on the Garden after the Bruins-Maroons free-for-all. Lionel Conacher of Maroons, in center, continues to orate. He was a principal figure in the row, flattening several Bruins. The Bruins won, 2 to 0, in a rough clash. Four major penalties were handed out, to Babe Seibert and Red Beattie of the Bruins, and Stew Evans and Conacher of the Maroons.

Home-Run Baker Bids for Foxx

whose wheels he played in childhood and I might still be milking cows.

I happen to be one of the fortunate ones who was endowed with physical gifts that tend to make a batter, but those gifts would not have been worth an old hat if I had not been given an opportunity to develop them early in life. Of course, I was unusually strong, which gave me a double advantage, since my strength permitted me to hit a ball farther than average distance, and thus to attract the attention of the professional scouts.

Strength Not All-Important Factor

But strength is not the most important part of batting, and there are some lightweight players in the major leagues today who can whale the ball tremendous lengths simply because they have mastered the knack of timing and striding to hit the ball at the top of their swing. Melvin Ott of the Giants is such a boy, and Mel does not weigh more than 160 pounds today, yet he can hit a ball farther than any member of the Giants with the single exception of Bill Terry, the manager.

I have come a long way in major league baseball, in spite of the fact that I am still comparatively young as major league ages go. And, despite the fact that I have frequently flirted with the batting leadership of the American League, I do not know all there is to the business of batting yet and I find that I am still picking up little hints that are useful.

It seems a long while back to that afternoon in May of 1924 when I found a letter, postmarked from Easton, Maryland, in the family R. F. D. box.

I tore it open with a lot of curiosity, since we did not receive many letters and one rarely came for me personally. It read:

"James Foxx, Esq., Dear Sir—I've got a friend down your way who has been telling me about how you can hit a baseball and how that you are still just a kid. If you would like to come up to Easton some day next week and put on a uniform for me, I will look you over and pay your expenses both ways. If you are as good as my friend says, maybe I will only have to pay them one way."

Baker Gives Foxx Chance to Show Stuff

It was signed by Frank Baker and, of course, I knew of "Home-Run" Baker, the old Athletics' third baseman in the days of the $100,000 infield" (McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker), who at that time was managing the Easton club.

Baker had, as I knew, driven 15 home runs in 1911, which was considered a lot of home runs in those days before handle-swinging and the lively ball brought Babe Ruth's record of 60. Last year with the Athletics I hit 15 home runs in a single month and 36 in the season. But I believe that had Baker had the "rabbit ball" to deal with, and if he had set himself to swing for the fences, he would have hit 50 home runs a season. Even today there is a flow to his swing that is unmistakable to the eye of an experienced batsman.

I know what it means to bat against the old ball of Baker's playing day, for we had a dozen or so of them in spring training at Fort Myers a few years ago. Rube Walberg, who is my teammate again on the Red Sox, threw them up to me at the plate and I gave the bat everything I had. It felt as though I had hit a piece of wood and seemed to have less than two-thirds the carry of the ball of the present day. I doubt that more than two of my drives would have gone for home runs in a major league park.

Jimmy Gives Players Laugh on Debut

When I reached Easton I went straight to the hotel where Baker lived. Frank was sitting silently in the lobby among some of his players and he greeted me with reserve. I have since come to understand that it is good baseball manners to sit thus and gaze off into space, and wherever ball clubs stop, whether minor or major league, you will find the players ranged in silence before the hotel door like hens against a sunny wall.

"What are you?" asked Baker, when we finally arrived at the Easton clubhouse and I was being fitted with a spare uniform.

"A farmer," I said, and was surprised when the players on either side broke into a laugh.

"Yeh," said Baker, "I know. But what position do you play?"

"Oh," I answered sheepishly, for I did not want my prospective teammates to take me for a greeny, "I can play any position except shortstop. I don't like to play shortstop."

"Well, we will give you a shot at catcher," said Baker.

statutes and attempt to operate the track at a profit next year and meet financial obligations now amounting to between $140,000 and $150,000.

Attorneys representing three major creditors were present when it was proposed and agreed by several members of the association, and creditors that this course should be followed.

Three major creditors were selected to represent all the creditors on the reorganization committee and the chairman, it is understood will be either one of two of these: Joseph Sullivan of Lowell or Michael McDonough of Swampscott.

The American learned at the same time that deputy internal revenue collectors have filed with Collector Judge William Welch a complete report which includes the recommendation of an investigating field agent that immediate steps be taken to collect more than $27,000 owned the government by the track for amusement tax.

This tax was due December 1. The government and other creditors, with the exception of the state racing commission and holders of uncashed winning parimutuel tickets, will not benefit from the association's $35,000 bond now in possession of the state commission.

And under an agreement with the association the commission can also cause the bonding company to hold in escrow approximately $4000 due winning ticket holders.

The association has more than 90 creditors, including 28 horse owners.

TOP CONDITION VITAL

SKATER Needs Fresh AIR

PROPER FOOD IMPORTANT

This is the second of a series of articles on ice skating by Irving Jaffee, holder of three Olympic championships and the world's professional title, demoted to nil all entrants in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser Silver Skates Derby, to be held at a Boston park location on Sunday, January 26. Readers wishing to obtain any additional information write to Irving Jaffee, Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, and it will be answered in Jaffee's column.

By Irving Jaffee

Never get discouraged at mild weather so that you might let up on your training routine.

You may be caught napping and out of condition, one of the greatest dangers to athletes, whether you are a beginner or the favorite to win a race.

Suppose you have to get to school, run errands or get to business mornings, or an entertaining that evening, don't fail to take advantage of an opportunity of using your own locomotion, by taking at least a half mile walk, swinging your arms briskly, before getting on your train or auto.

Good Developer

This simple daily excercise will help develop your chest, thighs, leg muscles and most important of all strong use of ankles to help your balancing on those steel blades.

When sitting down for your evening meal, don't overeat, the fault of most improperly trained athletes, eat the simple nourishing and digestible foods.

Plenty of vegetables of all kinds, fruits, broiled or cooked meats several times weekly. Eating good, easily digestible meats, non-fried, will give you the energy and vitality to withstand cold and exposure necessary for skating in nature's outdoors.

More Rules

Don't stay up late, get between eight and ten hours sleep nightly. Don't stand on your legs long period, whenever avoidable, to prevent tied-up legs and muscle-boundness.

Keep happy. Don't worry, the other fellow or girl has the same disadvantages as you have to contend with.

RING SERIES Opens Saturday

Competition will be furnished in 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and heavyweight classes.

"I don't mind a fellow like Eli-die Shore taking a punch at me," declared Lionel Conacher after the game, "Shore will smack you around right in your own back yard. He don't wait until he has you stag-set, I'll take it from Shore but I'll murdor any of those safety first birds."

Of course, in view of the fact that the Bruins were on the winning end of the tilt, the game will not suffer from the free-for-all fight. The Maroons are very broad-minded and always willing to please the hockey public, even to the extent of taking a few snitches for the sake of the "fastest game on earth."

The Bruins have now won three out of ten games. But, in order to finish on the winning end, they have been obliged to shut out their victims. They blanked the Americans 1 to 0 and turned in 2 to 0 victories over the Rangers and Maroons.

Now that the Bruins have broken their three-game losing streak, the fans are convinced that they are by no means hopelessly out of the running although they still feel that two or three new forwards would help the cause.

Free-for-All Fight as Bruins Win, 2-0

By Bill Grimes

They took the Montreal Maroons into camp, 2 to 0, but they lost about seven decisions to Lionel Conacher, during the free-for-all fight which developed during the final period.

From the start of the game, it was evident that there was trouble in the offing. It was one of the most over-officiated games played here in years. Johnny Mitchell, a newcomer to the referee's roster, did not make a very auspicious debut.

Johnny should have had a stick. He and Mike Rodden were running the boys for biting their tongues, especially in the third period.

Battle Rages

Late in the third period, Babe Siebert rushed down the left wing boards. Inside the Maroons' territory, Lionel Conacher checked Babe against the boards. For a moment, it looked like a regulation check. Suddenly Conny hooked Babe to the chin and the Bruin defense man sank to the boards. Then, like a flash, Conacher whirled around and took a punch at a spectator, who had socked him while he was working on Babe.

At this point, Red Beattie took a flying leap and landed on Conacher's back. Just as soon as Beattie went into action, players from both teams rushed into the melee and fists were flying from all directions.

Roger Jenkins, who had been relieved a couple of minutes before the barrage was laid down, raced off the Bruin bench and apparently decided that Conscher was his pet hate. Jenkins and Conacher swapped a few punches and then Jenkins went down. While he was on the ice, some player skated on his hand and Roger received a painful cut, which necessitated six stitches.

NEW RINK For Olympic SKATERS

By William Shirer

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Dec. 11 (US)—Germany has left nothing undone in perfecting he technical arrangements for the Olympic winter games opening here February 6.

Most important of the technical innovations is the Olympic artificial ice stadium. This will ensure the carrying through of the ice hockey and figure skating championships.

Garmisch lies 3300 feet lower in the Alps than does St. Moritz, where eight years ago your correspondent saw the winter Olympics turned into a farce because spring came early.

The great thaw of that year incidentally robbed Irving Jaffe, the American hope, of an Olympic speed skating title The ice softened and though the race was run before the contest was called no contest.

Around the rink which is 200 feet by 100 feet, has been built a wooden stadium accommodating 8000 people. Modern locker rooms and a restaurant have been constructed under the main stand.

Seven press camps has been well-looked after, the main press box containing places for 300 newspaper men each, provided with a typewriter desk. Also in the stadium is a postoffice telegraph and telephone office and four broadcasting quarters.

A new system of electrical timing has been provided for the ice hockey matches at the stadium Two electric clocks have been placed at one side of the stadium, one of which registers the three 15-minute playing periods and the other the normal time which elapses during the game.

St. M. Zemzytzki, whose fertile brain was responsible for the dizzy bob-run at Lake Placid, is also responsible for the run at Garmisch this year. It appears to be slightly less hazardous and a trifle slower than the one at Lake Placid, but not much.

The bruns 16 big curves, all of them difficult. The high point of the race is reached at Bavaria curve, a wicked hair-pin turn which if successfully negotiated only leads to another hair-pin near the end.

However, the German Olympic committee emphasizes the "safety" of the run and believes that amateur or reckless teams can reach the bottom without mishap.

(Another installment of this story will appear in these pages tomorrow.)

SMITH COLLEGE GIRL ON AIR TONIGHT

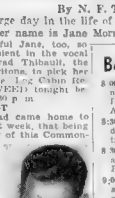
By N. F. T.

This is a large day in the life of a certain 19-year-old Smith College girl. Her name is Jane Morrison.

Quite a beautiful Jane, too, so they tell. Her talent in the vocal line caused Conrad Thibault, the popular radio baritone, to pick her for a place on the Log Cabin Revue" program (WEEI) tonight between 10 and 10 30 p m.

CLOSE CONTEST

It seems Conrad came home to Northampton last week, that being his native corner of this Commonwealth, h i s mission being to select a songstress from among the Smith student sweetness who wished to win a way into the radio realm. This the tall, auburn haired Jane Morrison landed the opportunity to transmit her mezzo-soprano voice over a coast to coast hook up on the air.



"N. F. T."

Conrad claime with emphasis that the judging was far from a cinch Yet, Conrad commenting praised him a bit of a diplomat as well as a leading loudspeaker baritone.

Some snowbound drama comes in for treatment by Fred Allen and his "Town Players" tonight (WEEI) when it's "Town Hall Tonight" time at 9 o'clock. Fred guides the players to-night once a year and suffers too much in comparison with the romantic good old summertime.

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

Burns and Allen, with Jacques Renard due for Boston personal appearing early in January . . . Lady listeners like the way Martha Lee in Boston Evening American cooking saturday's Xmas Tree Party. Yankee Networkers speak to each other as "Doctor" by way of novelty and it produces the funniest feeling to be so addressed when waiting into announcement . . . LEWIS HANEY ON POLITICS:

Power of States

FACES NEW TEST IN

Hands of Roosevelt

By this, he means that he stands for centralizing economic control at Washington. Of course, this means breaking down the power of the states.

He asserts that separate and sovereign states will never be able to "balance the agricultural life of a nation"—whatever that may mean. We may therefore suppose that he desires to destroy state government in all important respects.

• • •

This idea of Roosevelt's is contrary to the Constitution and to the ideas of those who founded our government.

It is contrary to currently expressed opinion of our Supreme Court. Only the other day that body decided that Congress cannot destroy an institution holding a state charter, in this case a state building and loan association. That would be, said the court, "a trespass upon the state," and an encroachment upon the "reserved powers of the state."

• • •

But above all, it is opposed to the common sense of a majority of the American people. Some of us may not have thought the thing out, but our ideas are about as follows:

We don't want our private affairs to be controlled by some remote political power.

We don't want our economic life, as it exists in one section of the country, to be subjected to political power exercised by other sections of the country.

We don't want politicians running our business, and least of all do we want federal politicians at Washington trying to run our local business.

This is why most of us will not agree with Roosevelt's attempt to enlarge what he calls "the organized power of the nation" over our economic life.

• • •

We are willing to have the federal government protect us against discriminatory actions by people in other states. We are willing to have it give us a uniform currency. We are glad to have it chase crooks across state lines. But there we draw the line.

We don't want federal politicians telling us as laborers what is a "fair wage" in New York, Detroit and San Francisco. We don't want Wallace and Tugwell telling us how much cotton to plant in Georgia and Texas, how many pigs to kill in Illinois and Iowa, and how many potatoes to sell in Idaho and Maine.

• • •

The great fact is that people are different and sections of the country are different. No bunch of Washington politicians, even if they were selected for their efficiency, can know what is best for each person and each section.

Furthermore, they would necessarily have to enforce general regulations, dealing with us in great masses. They would, in other words, be required to regiment us.

As a matter of fact, such attempts come down to this: They make the economic or business affairs of the people in one section subject to political control dominated by some other section or sections.

Look what the "silver senators" have done to our Treasury and to our trade with China. Why should the dairy farmers be the goat of the tariff arrangement with Canada?

• • •

And don't forget that this notion of "the organized power of the nation" means political organization. It means a political dictator. It means politics in business.

When Roosevelt talks about "our government" he means his "administration." As he made his speech, Farley sat behind him. "Organized power" means political organization. If Harding and Dougherty were there, it would mean their power. At present, it means Roosevelt, Hopkins and Farley.

• • •

The importance of states in our system of government is that they give us a chance to try different methods according to our different environments and different ideas. They are an important bulwark of American democracy.

They have Roosevelt's "organized power of the nation" in Russia and in Italy.

Just think that over.

TO PAY Dividend EXTRA

BANK OF AMERICA

Los Angeles, December 11—Directors of the Bank of America N. T. & S. A., meeting here today declared an extra dividend amounting to $1,000,000 in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $1,250,000, bringing total dividends of the National Bank for the year to $6,000,000.

Both the regular quarterly dividend of 62½ cents a share on the 2,000,000 outstanding shares of Bank of America, N. T. & S. A. and the extra dividend of 50 cents a share will be payable December 31 to stock of record December 15.

Directors of Bank of America California, associated state bank, declared the regular quarterly dividend of 42 2 3 cents a share on the 60,000 outstanding shares.

As Transamerica Corporation owns 99.94 per cent. of the stock of the Bank of America N. T. & S. A. and 98.98 per cent. of the stock of Bank of America, California, it will receive $6,977,000 of the total $6,100,000 dividends of the two banks for 1935.

Improvement

L. M. Giannini reported to the board the marked improvement in business conditions throughout California. He showed that the Bank of America, N. T. & S. A. during the month of October made 20,357 loans for an aggregate amount of $34,008,930.50.

Of this amount, $2,685,328.03 were in real estate loans, $762,295.00 in mutual mortgage loans, and $1,916,744.74 in modernizing loans. The balance was in commercial loans to business, industry and agriculture.

These figures do not include loan renewals, real estate contrac's, commercial paper or call loans. During October the net increase in loan total was $6,393,862.14.

Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman of the bank's general executive committee, in commenting on the report said:

"This is the first substantial evidence of a change in the loan trend, indicating a returning confidence and a business, industrial and agricultural expansion on an extensive scale.

"The change augurs well for continued increased profits in the months ahead. Business and the bank will profit alike. Money has been a drug on the market, but the indications are that this condition is rapidly changing."

Dividend

Old Colony Insurance Co. declared the usual semi-annual dividend of $4 per share, of which $2 is payable Feb. 1, 1936, to stock of record January 20, and $2 is payable May 1, 1936, to stock of record April 20, and in addition, a special dividend of $10 a share, payable Dec. 30, 1935, to stock of record December 19.

Loomis Sayles

Loomis Sayles Second Fund, Inc., declared a dividend of 10 cents a share and a "special" dividend of 13 cents, both payable January 2 to stock of record December 7.

WHO Did Kill SILVER?

MEDIEVAL U. S., IT SEEMS

By WYLIE KING
Copyright, 1935, by United Service

London, Dec. 11 — Who killed silver? The United States with its medieval bimetalism.

Who will be the chief mourners? The Eastern silver speculators, who offered 1,000,000 ounces in London without finding a buyer after several hours of cabling everywhere in the world.

When the price fixing was a second time postponed yesterday, offers flooded in for an estimated 8,000,000 ounces of old silver and 17,000,0000 ounces of forward silver, but United States representatives bluntly replied:

It was decided late in the day to create a precedent, leave the price unfixed, and return orders, pending fresh instructions today.

I understand that the United States Treasury confidentially intimated what its policy will be, but are unwilling to take the whole of spot offers.

O. H. Hobson, of the News-Chronicle, saw in the situation one of the famous paradoxes of a Gilbert and Sullivan opera. He stated:

"It would be a Gilbertian situation if, a month after wrecking China's currency system, President Roosevelt suddenly jettisoned the legislation that was responsible."

London silver dealers were not worried because for months past they have simply acted as middlemen.

The Bank of England bought 315 557 pounds sterling of gold, causing its reserve to show 200 000 000 pounds sterling, the highest ever, and equal to $30,000,000 pounds sterling at the current price of gold.

COTTON TRADE Outlook Improves

New York, Dec. 11 — Modification of the government program for assisting the cotton growers, by encouraging the planting of a larger acreage and the reduction of the loan values, have resulted in a definite improvement in the outlook for the American cotton trade, according to a review of the trade contained in the eighth Cotton Year Book of the New York Cotton Exchange, just issued.

The way has been opened to the offering of larger supplies of American cotton in world markets on a price parity with foreign growths, and hope has been revived that the decrease in foreign production will be checked and foreign markets for American cotton will be recaptured, it is stated.

1936 OIL PROSPECTS:

BRIGHT OUTLOOK

Despite Numerous Uncertainties

New York, Dec. 11—Recent developments in the petroleum industry have placed the earnings outlook in a relatively favorable light, despite continuing uncertainties facing production regulation and the improbability of a substantial correction of unsatisfactory marketing conditions, according to a current survey by the Standard Statistics Company of New York.

The statistical position of the trade is currently the strongest in several years. Despite the fact that aggregate production of crude oil in the United States is running nearly 7 per cent above 1934 levels, stocks of crude oil on hand have declined steadily and are now at the lowest point in more than ten years.

Uncertainties continue to confront the industry, but the most disturbing of recent threats to the maintenance of present operating conditions is believed to have been largely removed. Of the latter, the most menacing was the California situation, which is now on the way toward correcting itself.

Under existing supply and demand conditions in the industry, proration measures need not be consistently more stringent than at present.

The ever-present possibility, however, of the discovery of large new oil supplies indicates that, until more effective regulation is adopted for the industry at large, the outlook for maintaining stabilized production conditions must be classed as somewhat uncertain.

Barring the materialization of such uncertainties, current evidence points to an extension of the 1935 earnings improvement into the coming year.

Gradual Recovery Of Curb Prices

Mining shares were unsettled by the silver situation and Newmont broke 2¼ points to 71¼ before recovering. Sunshine dipped ¾ point but got its loss in the rebound.

BUSINESS Failures Lower

Commercial failures in the United States as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended December 5, dropped to 211 from 229 in the week previous.

This total was 21 below the 232 reported for the corresponding week in 1934. For the comparative period in 1933, the total was 203. The failure figures have not reached 200 in any week so far this year.

Bank to Pay

Boston Insurance

Boston Insurance Company declared the usual semi-annual dividend of $5 a share, of which $4 is payable January 2, 1936, to stock of record December 20, 1935, and $1 is payable April 1, 1936, to stock of record March 20, 1936, and in addition a special dividend of $5 a share, payable January 2, 1936, to stock of record December 20, 1935.

TO ITALY

U. S. Total At New High

America's attitude toward the war in Africa is defined by an Act of Congress. American munition manufacturers are prohibited from sending their wares to either Ethiopia or Italy.

The primary reason for the embargo, of course, is to "keep America out of foreign entanglements." Another factor, financial aid to belligerents, which helped put us in the last war, is now out of the question.

Also, we have no bone to pick, nor stake in Ethiopia, and Americans have been warned that they travel in Italian (and Ethiopian) ships at their own risk.

However, there is what many believe to be a serious impediment in our path to complete neutrality. We have prohibited the exporting of "implements of war" to the belligerents but we have not officially prohibited the selling of primary materials that serve in warfare, such as cotton, copper and scrap iron.

Our merchandise exports in full in October, 1935, totaled $6 821 000, which compares with $4 975 887 in the previous month and $6 225 917 in October, 1934.

At the same time, total exports of the United States in October reached a peak of $221 200,000.

The Administration does not leave much doubt, however, as to its attitude toward "potential war material" exports to Italy and Ethiopia.

The latest step, in addition to continuous "moral pressure," is the threat by the Shipping Board Bureau.

The board, as a principal mortgage holder of many American lines, hinted that it might become a tough creditor to those lines which do not strictly comply with the neutrality policy

Burns to Address Advertisers

Judge John J. Burns, general counsel for the securities and exchange commission, will be guest speaker at the dinner and meeting of the Financial Advertisers Association of New England to be held Thursday evening December 19 in the 14th floor of the Boston Chamber of Commerce building.

The particular importance of the work of the commission at this time makes his address one of timely and educational interest and members of the financial fraternity all over New England are expected to attend the dinner.

Roy H. Booth of the National Shawmut Bank and president of the local group will preside.

CHRYSLER Shipments Up

Shipments of passenger cars and trucks by Chrysler Corporation in 11 months of this year were 87 per cent greater than corresponding period of 1934. In the 11 months shipments of Plymouth, Dodge, De Soto and Chrysler passenger cars and Dodge trucks totaled 739,856 units, against 541,129 a year before.

Shipments thus far this year were nearly 200 000 units ahead of last year's shipments for 11 months

Maine Power

Central Maine Power Company declared a dividend of 87½ cents on the 6 per cent preferred and 75 cents on the preferred stock $5 dividend series. All dividends are payable January 1 to stock of record December 10

J. C. Penney "Extra"

J. C. Penney Co. declared an extra dividend of $1.50 and a dividend for the current quarter of 75 cents on the common, both payable December 31 to stock of record December 20. In the four previous quarters dividends of 50 cents each were paid

Providence Gas

Providence Gas Company declared regular quarterly dividend of 20 cents a share, payable January 2, 1936, to stock of record December 14, 1935

DECLINE In Output OF STEEL

SCRAP PRICE TREND FIRM

New York, Dec. 11—A moderate decline in the rate of steel production for the current week reflects a relaxation of consumer pressure for material following reaffirmation of most existing prices for the first quarter, said Iron Age today in its weekly review.

The current operating level was placed at 56 per cent, a decline of 1 point from the previous week.

As against the recession in production, there was a firming trend in prices for scrap steel, the review declared.

The publication's index of scrap rose from $13 26 to $13.42 a ton, the highest level reached since September, 1930.

"Few steel buyers," the summary commented, "actually accumulated large stocks, but most users had entered heavy commitments for December delivery and these have been revised to spread shipments through the coming quarter.

"Relieved of the necessity of stocking finished steel against higher prices, many in the trade, especially jobbers, are reverting to the customary practice of paring inventories as the year-end approaches.

Reaction

"The reaction on mill schedules, as far as flat-rolled products are concerned, has been cushioned by the large day-to-day requirements of the automobile industry, which is operating at a high rate following fall introduction of new models.

"The heavy requirements of motor car makers are also reflected in liberal buying of pipe, contracting in pig iron by automotive foundries.

"In the face of less pressing, albeit still sizable demands on finishing mills, the industry's operations are benefiting from heavy anticipatory orders for semi-finished steel, the prices of which did advance.

"Similarly, there has been an acceleration of the output of the few finished items that were marked up in price.

"These counteracting influences, together with the general trend of consumption, will, among them, determine the course of steel production during the remainder of the month.

N. E. Department Store Sales Up

In November, department store sales in New England increased 7 2 per cent over a year ago, it is estimated by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston

This gain compares with one of only .5 per cent in October, New England thus joining other parts of the country in the general expansion of retail trade with the approach of the Christmas season.

Each New England state showed an increase in November, the largest being one of 7.3 per cent in Massachusetts and smallest one of 2.1 per cent in Maine. Boston stores had a gain of 7.4 per cent.

NEW RECORD

Set by EDISON OF Boston

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The best November in the history of the company. That is the story accompanying Edison of Boston's consumption report.

All classifications contributed to the showing which boosted the portion of kilowatt hours 9.67 per cent above November, 1934. It is under the industrial heading that establishment analysts look to find support for recovery ideas. A sustained improvement of nearly 20 per cent since the first of the year is shown there. Commercial and residential consumption also continuous throughout upward with comparative gains of 3.5 and 4.5 per cent, respectively. . .

From Springfield comes a news dispatch that is a short prosperity story. The Springfield National Bank has sold the equipment for the defunct Palmer Steel Company of Chicopee. The buyers of the steel machinery, formerly assessed for $100,000, were other steel and shipbuilding concerns. Besides, a 30-ton crane, fabricating and conveying equipment were disposed of by the bank. And it was accomplished because of the strength of an improved market. Heavy industry is stirring, after three years of dormancy. When equipment of this type is in demand, there is little room left for the doubters.

Headline Hunting: "Rhode Island payrolls higher" . . . "Department store sales up 7.5 per cent" . . . "Electricity output peak" . . . "Earnings increase" . . . "Boston Insurance pays $5 special dividend" . . . "1936 seen as better business year than 1935 has been" . . . "Overseas motor sales gain" . . . "U. S. Steel ships more steel this year in 11 months than in entire year 1934" . . . "Daily average sales of variety stores 5½ per cent to $1 higher in November this year than in same month last year" . . . Why quarrel with a market with such a background?

* * *

Taking our cue from the above, and adding the forecasts of reasonable and conservative observers, it is offered as information, other than bullish advice to investors. The trader may feel that a decent current market action, but the investor can only hope for a decent one under which to accumulate more stock. And the average business man, who can only devote a fraction of his time to the market, is once again reminded that the plan of splitting funds 50-50 between investments and trading accounts still appeals to us as the sensible one to follow.

* * *

Notebook—American Can, one of the stocks listed here last week as registering a minor bear signal is doing very poorly . . . Of late it has actually been showing up more poorly than the market averages . . . Any minor rally should be used to dispose of stock . . . Wonder if the break in silver prices will alter rumored plans for handsome dividends by certain white metal miners? Bonds continue to reach fresh peaks . . . But some classifications could stand a breathing spell . . . If not a corrective reaction.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

FLOYD GIBBONS

And now, ladies and gentlemen, in this corner we have the pulchritudinous pugilist known in adventure circles as the Honorable Floyd Gibbons, champion story sleuth of the universe! And is he there with the punch, folks? Well, just run your eye over the knockout yarns appearing in this corner regularly, and judge for yourself! Come on, boys and girls, we're ready to meet all challengers!

This cave-man impression of the champion adventure sleuth was sent to us by a member of the gentler sex, and we take a great deal of pleasure in extending our gloves to Anna Maranville for this contribution to the artists' corner. -The Editor.

In a Runaway Balloon

Hanging by One Foot, Ed Jackson Sees the Countryside

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Publication of your story may be delayed a bit while Floyd is in the war zone, because of the time it takes his mail to reach him. Floyd asks all his adventurers to "be patient with a hard workin' feller."

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Tomorrow it may be you, but today it's Edward G. Jackson, of 260 West 78th street, New York, N. Y., who catches the ten-spot daily prize and the membership in the Adventurers' Club with a rip-snorting yarn that will take your breath away—as it did Ed's.

Ed—like most of us New Yorkers—was born in another state. The state Ed's mother and father picked for him was Texas. He is 48 today and he's had a lot of wild adventure in his life, but the one Ed remembers the most happened when he was only 14.

Ed's home town was McKinney, Collin County, Texas, and the annual County Fair, in that memorable year, found him rarin' to go. Ed wanted to see the big thriller of the fair—the balloon ascension—so he slipped in early to the fair grounds and hung around the place where the big, hot air bag was being made ready.

They didn't have airplanes in those days and the balloons were a lot different than those used today. Instead of gas they used hot air. Attendants built a hot fire under the open mouth of the big silk bag, and when it was filled it shot up into the air with the aeronaut handing on a small trapeze.

Well, sir, while the 14-year-old Ed stood gaping at the balloon crew making preparations for the flight, he got the surprise of his life. The balloonist gave him a job. They needed somebody to go inside the flapping bag and keep the sparks of the fire burning under it from igniting the silk. And Ed needed the two dollars offered.

"I got inside the balloon," Ed writes, "with a bucket of water and a sponge. They had a roaring fire in a pit dug in the ground, and whenever a spark got near the balloon envelope I tossed some water on it. As the balloon began to fill up soon held in place by sand bags hanging all around from ropes. It was pretty hot in there, too, but I found the job exciting and I liked it.

"Outside the daredevil sat ready in his trapeze, all set to get pulled up the minute the balloon had enough hot air in it to lift him. Five or six men were hoding on to the ropes so that it would not break loose before it was filled.

"Suddenly the men let go. The balloon was not full but it started up just the same and dragged the daredevil with it. I was watching him now and was on the outside, right under the whole thing. He yelled that it wasn't time yet, but it was too late now, so he quickly cut himself loose and dropped to the ground when he was about ten feet up.

"The balloon, relieved of the flier's weight, shot into the air and I SHOT UP WITH IT! Faster than it takes to tell it I was tripped up. I expected to fall on my face, but I didn't. One of the balloon ropes had tangled around my ankle and up I went!

"A groan came up from the crowd. I could see their agonized expressions as I rose above them, hanging head down. It had all happened so fast that I didn't realize what had happened until I was above the trees and sailing higher.

"The balloon hadn't been filled enough to permit the flier to do his stunt, but my weight was much less and it lifted me easily. I didn't know what to do. I was scared to death and afraid to move for fear that my foot would become loose with disastrous results. I winced as my head just missed a telegraph pole, as the wind swung us across the field and over the countryside.

"I had never been up in a balloon before, so you can imagine how I liked my first trip. I couldn't see how I could possibly get away with my life. Even if the balloon did come down finally, I figured that my brains would be beaten out as the bag dragged me across the ground. If my foot came loose I would fall to my death.

"I think the worst feeling a person can have in this life is the feeling of being utterly helpless in the hands of Fate. If a man has a chance—however slim—to fight for his life, it a not so bad. But hanging from one foot in mid-air, with nothing to grasp hold of and nothing to do, strikes terror to anyone's heart."

Well, sir, witnesses said Ed never went up over 150 feet in the air, but he says he thought he was up in the stratosphere! At that, you can get killed just as dead from a fall that high as you can miles in the air. My friends, Will Rogers and Wiley Post—God bless them wherever they are—fell only 60 feet!

After half an hour of anxiety on earth and stark terror in the air, Ed began to feel the balloon descending. The hot air was beginning to cool and drop him to earth. This, strange to say, terrified him all the more. At least high in the air—with little danger of a collision—meant a few minutes more life to him, but close to the ground anything might happen.

But what goes up must come down, and down came Ed. It looked to him like the earth was coming up to meet him. Swish! He ducked as the top branches of a tall tree reached for him.

He saw the crowds on foot and in all sorts of conveyances rushing toward him. He even recognized the town ambulance in the throng. Then a big telegraph pole with hundreds of wires rushed at him. He held his breath. Was it to be electrocution, after all?

Wham! The balloon ropes hit the telegraph wires! There was no flash. Ed swung on and nearly did a "loop the loop," but the rope and the wires held. Some thoughtful person had ordered the power cut off.

As Ed swung downward in his arc he saw the earth once more coming up to hit him. Was the rope long enough? He mumbled a prayer and it worked. The rope held and it was long enough. His head swung safely by five feet from the ground!

On the return swing strong hands caught Ed and cut him loose and he was soon safe, but bruised and dizzy. And what do you suppose, Ed says, was the worst shock of the whole thing?

And there's another ten, boys and girls, every day for YOUR story.

Floyd Gibbons, himself an adventurer of note, is never too busy to listen to the other fellow's experience. He wants to hear the story of the biggest thrill in YOUR life, and wants to pay you ten dollars for it. Floyd says anyone can draw down one of those ten dollar checks, or win the hundred that he gives for the best TRUE adventure story of the month. Literary ability has nothing to do with it. Send him YOUR story. Win a prize and become a member of the Adventurer's Club.

HOW TO WIN $100.00

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1935

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

BLUNDERING TOWARD WAR

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL, like a blindfolded man, stumbles and careens nearer to the brink of actual war with every move and utterance that he makes from day to day.

When we speak of the Secretary of State, we of course have in mind the President also, without whose approval he would not presume to act.

Not content to outstrip Great Britain and the League of Nations in hostility to Italy and an attempt to embargo oil and other commodities essential to her national existence, Secretary Hull announces he will ask the coming Congress for power to pursue a restrictive policy as to a greatly extended list of exports to Italy.

As Frank H. Simonds says in a recent open letter:

"With incredible skill British diplomacy has made the State Department the accessory of its anti-Italian policy and persuaded it to interpret the Neutrality Act in such a fashion as to crowd Italy to the wall."

One would think that, having forfeited the friendship of Italy and become the open ally of the League of Nations, Secretary Hull would call it a day—and lay off, at least for a few hours.

But that would be to under-estimate the ineptitude of our State Department and its capacity for inspired blundering.

* * *

SIMULTANEOUSLY with Secretary Hull's request for authority to ban the shipment of foodstuffs as well as munitions to Italy, he thrusts us into another distant zone of strife, where the outbreak of war may be only a matter of days.

His statement on the situation in North China, not addressed to Japan but intended for Japanese consumption, carrying the reminder that we stand upon all past treaties relating to Chinese territorial integrity, jams us deep and hard into the tense Japanese-Chinese situation as effectively as anything could do.

Although the Secretary of State refers to all treaties, he obviously has in mind the last and most important treaty signed in 1922, called the Nine Power pact.

* * *

ALTHOUGH Japan is a signatory of this treaty, in conjunction with Great Britain, France and the United States, it claims that it never became fully effective because of China's failure to comply with its obligations.

This may be a pretense but it is nevertheless arguable and difficult to disprove.

At any rate, Japan has treated the pact as inoperative, which is, in practical effect, equivalent to abrogation.

Here again we have not been content to move with other powers even under a group treaty, but must forge out in front, and trust to luck—being about all we can trust to—for someone to pull us out, or pull us back before it is too late.

* * *

WHILE no one questions the President's desire to avoid being drawn into war, he will never succeed if he allows a bungling Department of State to drive steadily in war's direction by gratuitous provocations and foolish and uncalled for interpositions in the quarrels of others.

A competent management of our foreign relations is very different from the daily futilities and luckless sorties in note-writing which Secretary Hull mistakes for diplomacy.

Utopia of Vultures

A READING of the news that comes out of Russia from day to day must impress all Americans that, compared to Czar Stalin's state capitalistic United States of America is practically A MODERN UTOPIA.

Stalin has now gone in for mass production which he names the "Stakhanoff System."

In telling his workers to slave to the bone he uses this language:

"If persuasion does not help, we will have to take more DECISIVE MEASURES."

It is this Asiatic Utopia of Vultures that Quack Doctor Tugwell is urging the farmers and laborers of America to "surge forward" and substitute for the free institutions under which our WORKINGMEN HAVE ACHIEVED AN INDEPENDENCE NEW IN HISTORY.

A Worthy Official

In these days of prison unrest Massachusetts is fortunate to have as Commissioner of Correction a man whose understanding of prison problems will eventually correct many of the evils existing at Concord and Charlestown.

Commissioner Arthur T. Lyman, a member of one of the Commonwealth's oldest families, is this man.

His program calling for modernization of penal institutions and segregation of inmates who show themselves worthy of rehabilitation, and his humane theories of parole regulation are so constructive and carefully planned that they deserve the support of every Massachusetts resident.

The Shoppers' Mecca

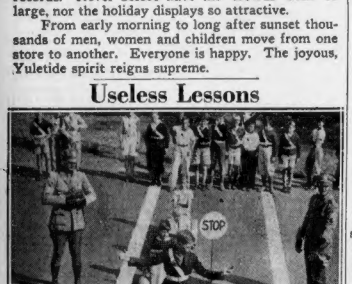
From early morning to long after sunset thousands of men, women and children move from one store to another. Everyone is happy. The joyous, Yuletide spirit reigns supreme.

Useless Lessons



(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Scooting this way and that way. Stopping here, speeding up there. It's a lot of fun. Children are having the time of their lives. But what does it all accomplish?

None of these children will obtain driving licenses for at least another decade. Today's lessons, however enjoyable, will have long since faded from memory then. So what?

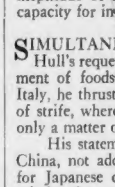
Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

There's one fact about women few men understand—namely, that they are the restless and excited sex.



Elsie Robinson

This, of course, is contrary to all masculine tradition. The average male firmly believes, as did all his grandpas before him, that females are timid, conservative, home-biding bodies who shrink from public life, despise taking chances, dread upheavals and years, above all things, to stay put.

The particular lady in question may be a super-armored dreadnaught, yet her lord will vow that there's only one thing for which she really cares, and that is L-O-V-E. Love, says he, is a woman's world.

The Dear Little Thing doesn't actually know what it's all about. What she really wants is A Home and A Man Of Her Own. Someone to protect her—stand between her and the world.

Than which there could hardly be a more cockeyed notion. For the dominant desire in the average young woman's heart, from the cradle to the graves, is ACTION. Something doing. Preferably a rumpus.

IT'S ONLY AN ACT

Not that she'd admit this. To the contrary, you can usually count on her to give a perfect imitation of a Broken Blossom the moment the guns start shooting. But it's only an act. Secretly, she adores on guns and hides her darndest to force the fracas—coyly pretending, all the while, that she's scared pink.

Men are really the cautious and conservative sex . . . the born duckers, dodgers and passers-of-the-buck. A man may enjoy the impersonal adventure of a hunting trip or the mass movement of a big war or political campaign.

But men are the stay-putters. A man will cheerfully follow the same program, year in, year out. Cling to the same old haunts and habits. Have you ever tried to take a treasured, five-year-old hat from Friend Husband? Or change the position of the living room furniture as a "surprise"? If you have—nuff said! If you haven't . . . DON'T!

Lives there a husband who hasn't wailed, out of abysmal bewilderment, "What's biting you?"

SHE WANTS A CHANGE

To which the answer is simple and obvious—the lady wants a change. She's bored. Why this hectic hunt for careers, jobs, club activities, social diversions? Why this daily parade of window shopping, hotel lounging? Restless-driving to and fro in a frenzy which no man can understand.

This same restlessness lies behind most divorces. Cruelty, incompatibility, faithlessness—nine times out of ten, these are faked charges. Actually, she has tired of the old model. He is no longer an alluring mystery, the source of excitement which her feminish imagination craves.

An alarming picture? Perhaps —but there's another side to it. Chances are, the human race would still be wallowing in the original mudhole were it not for this feminine yen for action and change of scenery. So, taking things by and large, maybe the Dear Little Woman's itching heel isn't such a catastrophe after all.

The Failure to Redeem

Expenditures of $7,752,332,000
Leaving a DEFICIT of $3,281,982,860

This DEFICIT is to be "financed" by a "decrease in working balances"—(a mere bookkeeping phrase)—of..
And BORROWINGS
of $3,123,726,722

P. S.—The President's 1936 "estimates" include an item of EIGHTY-FIVE MILLION DOLLARS to meet A DEFICIT for the current fiscal year in the Post Office Department, which Postmaster-General Farley recently said was making money for the Government!

New York Day by Day -:- O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

Usually they are hopped up with drugs. They choose congested districts because if there is an alarm they are able to escape more easily in the mass confusion. More often than taking it on the lam down a deserted street. Mostly they are from 18 to 21.

Recently two entered a smart upper Broadway shop. One inquired disarmingly: "Is my wife here?" A clerk in spirit of jest replied: "Is she a blonde?"

Then: "Yes, she's a blonde and this is a stick-up. Into the back room all of you or get plugged." In eight minutes they emptied the till and escaped.

It's their very innocent and juvenile appearance that throws the victims off guard. And through such unexpected bravado they have executed some amazing coups that skilled crooks might have fumbled. What is more, they are dangerous. When trapped, they begin shooting.

Elsie Maxwell's talent for making Gold Coast adults play childish games has also publicized her extravagantly on both continents. And as was quite natural she followed the parade of society entertainers into the night clubs.

Here is a strange adventure in human alchemy—mixing the gold and the dross and transmuting it into a high glitter of gaiety. Just her presence seems to inspire people to don paper hats, blow horns and otherwise cast off restraint.

Not all celebrities are owners of pedigreed kiyoodles. Any number own just plain dogs. Ginger Rogers, for instance, is greatly attached to a Texas mongrel of assorted lineage that goes by the name of Rover.

Rover is old and toothless now and was her constant companion in the gingham and pigtail days when she was just another freckled redhead in a country town. And Hollywood and triumph were as remote as Kamchatka.

Kidding or something has almost shorn Brooklyn of that ry lingo called Brooklynese, the argot that pronounces Cuba Cuber and oysters ersters. No one knows the origin of such patter. It just took root. Topsy-like.

She reads the Evening Joinal and she reads the Evening World

Now that the tumult and shouting have died down a bit for Billy Rose and his name glares monstrously on the biggest electric sign in town, Fanny Brice is entitled to a bow. Quite unconsciously she had much to do with the spectacular upshoot of this 1936 pint-sized Barnum.

Rose adores his willowy comedienne wife, but since their marriage has been given to flurries of private sulking over the general designation "Fanny Brice's husband." He often told friends in petulent moments he was going to get away from that tag and has done so with a bang.

Agricultural note: Dwight Deere Weeman, who has plowed up Broadway theatrically and spectacularly, is a member of the famous John Deere farm implement family.

Now that Dorothy Stone's dancing husband, Charles Collins, has been articled to a film studio, the migration of the Stone family to Hollywood is complete. All the rolling Stones, Fred, Carol and Paula, are on the west coast and under contract.

Probably no ties are so closely knit as those of the Stone clan. They are born troupers, but so paradoxically domesticated that when separated, their long-distance and telegraphic bills exceed that of almost any American family.

It takes one of those hard-boiled truckmen from his high perch to deflate a passerby. One today in 25th street called to a precisely dressed blade:

"Hey, Jack, gotta match?" The blade did not even cast him a glance, so he jockeyed up and twittered in falsetto: "You know what Mama said, Cuthbert, about chocolate sundaes, you little devil, you!"

Croatian Conspirators

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Rooted in the ancient soil of Indo-European race origins is the jungle of dynastic hatreds, clashing cultural antipathies and devious economic and political entanglements which obscure and muddle the trial in France of the three Croatians accused of complicity in the murder of King Alexander and Louis Barthou.

Edwin C. Hill

There are in the speech of these countries words identical with words of the same significance in Chinese. No amalgamation of all the centuries has fused these unassimilable elements. Only the murderous weapons of assassination are modern. Hoary with age are the hatreds and conspiracies which set the guns belching death, in Marseilles on October 9, 1934.

Croatian and Macedonian groups fight Serbian domination, not as revolutionists, but with that fanatical nationalism which seems to come to the fullest flower only in little hard-luck nations which one wouldn't think had much to fight for or about. Goat meat, kurds and sour wine seem to inspire a patriotism and an almost psychopathic chauvinism which no land of milk and honey ever knew. There are about 100,000 members of the Ustasha (pronounced Oahstah-shah) society, which the French police seek to assess with the Marseilles murders.

This name briefs the Hrvatska Ustasha, which means Croatian Internal Revolutionary Organization. Its symbol is a letter U, cradling a bursting bomb. The organization is well financed, with branches in the United States, Belgium, Chile and the Argentine—wherever there are Croatians to be mobilized against the Serbian overlordship in Yugoslavia.

Little did the old men of Versailles know what kind of dangerous chemical synthesis they were attempting when they made the Yugoslavia of today! This terrorist organization has melodramatic technique, which only the late Dion Boucicault could have plausibly dramatized.

They love to meet in dungeons, the deeper and damper the better; each man identified only by a symbol or a number; flaring candles, the swish of a bat's wing, a ritual of dagger strokes, abracadabra and muttering, whispers and growls, oaths, written in fresh blood from a dagger puncture; a voice of deep register, issuing from an unseen person somewhere in cavernous black shadow, decreeing death and assigning the killer to blood-letting.

Is it all quite adult or are they just boy scouts? Adult enough to throw a scare into the League of Nations last summer and stir it to one of its usual decorous and futile investigations. Adult enough to imperil delicate and critical diplomatic negotiations, to throw a dank miasma of conspiracy across boundary lines and induce a high court in Italy to refuse extradition to Dr. Ante Pavelich and another Croat, caught and held after the Marseilles killings.

A COURAGEOUS LEADER

This Dr. Pavelich, built like a football tackle and as nimble as a star halfback in dodging the police, is the leader of Ustasha, and for many years he has moved through its underground labyrinth of conspiracy.

Peasant born, he was trained for engineering, became a lawyer and then a writer of short stories. His life seems more fictional than any plot he ever invented. His roving and conspiring across boundary lines started eight years ago, when Stefen Radich was shot and killed in the House of Deputies.

ANCIENT GROUPS UNITE

While Ustasha, in its present form, is only six years old it is a fusion of ancient group held together by blood oaths, and it is the work of Dr. Pavelich.

Croats here discuss the above matters with the utmost reserve. The activities of Ustasha have induced formidable reactions by the incumbent powers in Yugoslavia.

There is predicted the complete ascendancy of a military dictatorship and even more rigorous and oppressive government, with a desperate civil war the only possible outcome.

The complete disruption of the nation lies ahead unless some miraculous diplomatic solvent of these undying hatreds is found. This is the prevailing opinion of the Croats in America. There is established here the Domobran, a Croatian society also active in the fight for Croatian autonomy, but sharply disassociating itself from terrorist organization.

Charles Thomas, president of its New York chapter, wishes it understood that the organization engages in open and legitimate activities, and that it is not to be confused with Ustasha.

Penalty of "Youth" Craze

By Winifred Black

Here's a nice little article which appeared in a university paper the other day:

"For generations we poor gullible males have catered to the weaker (?) sex. We pay double to see a show and listen to a discussion of Clark Gable's charms by the recipient of our charity.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED?

What on earth has happened to this generation, anyhow? I know a woman who has three sons and two daughters. Her sons treat her daughters as if they were males.

The mother of these strange beings is quite proud. All the time she is talking about them I keep thinking of when they were little and mamma was always away somewhere playing bridge.

Are we paying for the youth craze of a generation ago?

WHEN IT STARTED

Just about 20 years ago it all began, this fierce jealousy of daughter and mother. They stopped being mother and daughter and just became primitive females, each on the hunt for admiration and devotion.

I guess it's all right, very "modern" and enlightened and all that sort of thing, this new attitude of men and women which is so neatly expressed in that article in the university paper, but to my simple mind it's too disgusting to be amusing.

Can you really fall in love with a man who wants you to pay the bills, girls? Honestly now, can you?

Why, he'll be demanding that you pay your half for the baby bottle, but he won't demand that he get up and lose his sleep warming the milk. It's all too queer for words, isn't it? And is it perhaps a good deal your own fault, after all?
